HINTS FOR KNITTERS.

When winding wool always do so very loosely (wind round your fingers all the time for instance), so that the surface of the yarn is not injured in any way. Many of the wools sold already wound have a tab attached to a thread saying "Use from this end."

Nearly everybody knits differently—some very loosely, others tightly. When exact measurements are important, therefore, it is worth while working out your own tension first of all. Cast on 20 stitches and work about an inch or so in the pattern you are going to use. Then count how many stitches you knit to the inch and regulate your pattern accordingly.

Never knot your wool when joining two ends together. Simply cross the two wools a few inches from each end and knit with the double strands for three or four stitches. The ends can always be drawn through to the wrong side when finishing off.

NEW PARIS CRAZE.

Eye-Lashes to Match Dress.

The question of detachable eye-lashes is greatly agitating smart Frenchwomen.

In a Paris department store daily demonstrations are being given by pretty assistants. To-day they have had to be removed to a less frequented part of the building because of the crowd of men attracted.

Two systems are shown—one in which the lashes are removed nightly before retiring or may be changed in colour to suit the toilette, and another which is semi-permanent.

The lashes remain in position for three weeks, but during that time the wearer may not wash her eyes. They cost from 30 francs (about 8s.) a pair.

In a Paris motor-bus recently was observed a dainty blonde who wore a light green frock with eyelashes to match.

Kid and suede combine in this effective half and half treatment. Black and brown are the popular winter shoes.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

Fifteen-hundred-coiffures-in-one is this "Miss America" style of hairdressing. It is a composite, made by Joseph Capitaine, photographer, of the one and a half thousand coiffures arranged by leading hairdressers for the American Beauty and Style Show. It is a coiffure suited to red heads, blondes, brunettes and white-haired women. And a coiffure easy on almost any type of features. Note the soft wave over the forehead, the bun swirl over the ears, and the little curled ringlets at the nape of the neck.

PRACTICAL RECIPES.

Baked Apples.

½ lb. of fine bread-crumbs, 2 oz. each butter and sugar, 1 lemon, 6 large cooking apples.

Butter a deep pie-dish; add a layer of bread-crumbs; then a layer of peeled, cored, and sliced apples, mixed with the sugar; add a little grated lemon rind and juice, and repeat the crumbs, apples, &c., finishing with bread-crumbs.

Put some small dots of butter on the top, and bake for half an hour. Turn out, and serve with any rather sweet sauce.

Seven Cup Pudding

1 cupful of flour; 1 cupful of very fine bread-crumbs, 1 cupful each sugar, minced suet, jam, milk, and raisins; 1 teaspoonful of salt, ½ teaspoonful of carbonate of soda. Mix all these in their order; pour into a buttered mould, and steam for 3 hours.

To Clean the Thermos Flask Put a little vinegar in the bottom of the flask, and add some crushed eggshells.

Shake the flask briskly, leave it for a few minutes, shake it again, pour in enough water to half-fill the flask, and again shake it; empty, and rinse out. Leave it inverted, until every drop of moisture has dried, and when putting the flask away, do not replace the cork.

Ink Stains on Silver

To remove the stains, pour a very small quantity of fresh ink on to them, and with a soft cloth rub the ink off briskly. The old stain will come away.

FASHIONABLE SLEEVES

Sleeves for the new coats have an important role. They do a lot to give a feminine air to a smart wrap.

Capelets and caps at the top of sleeves continue to be favoured in

FASHION NOTES.

Frocks to be Shorter.

Shorter frocks are making their appearance this season, especially for daytime. For evening, women still cling to the ankle-length or floor-length skirt. Trains are only worn by dowagers.

Coats will also be shorter, and will show four inches of the dress hem. The new frocks are mostly made of silk-crepe, but the most successful are a mixture of pure and artificial silk, which produces a pleasing matt surface and the required heaviness for tailoring.

By the way, all the best dresses are tailored. Note this, please. Frills and flounces are to be discarded.

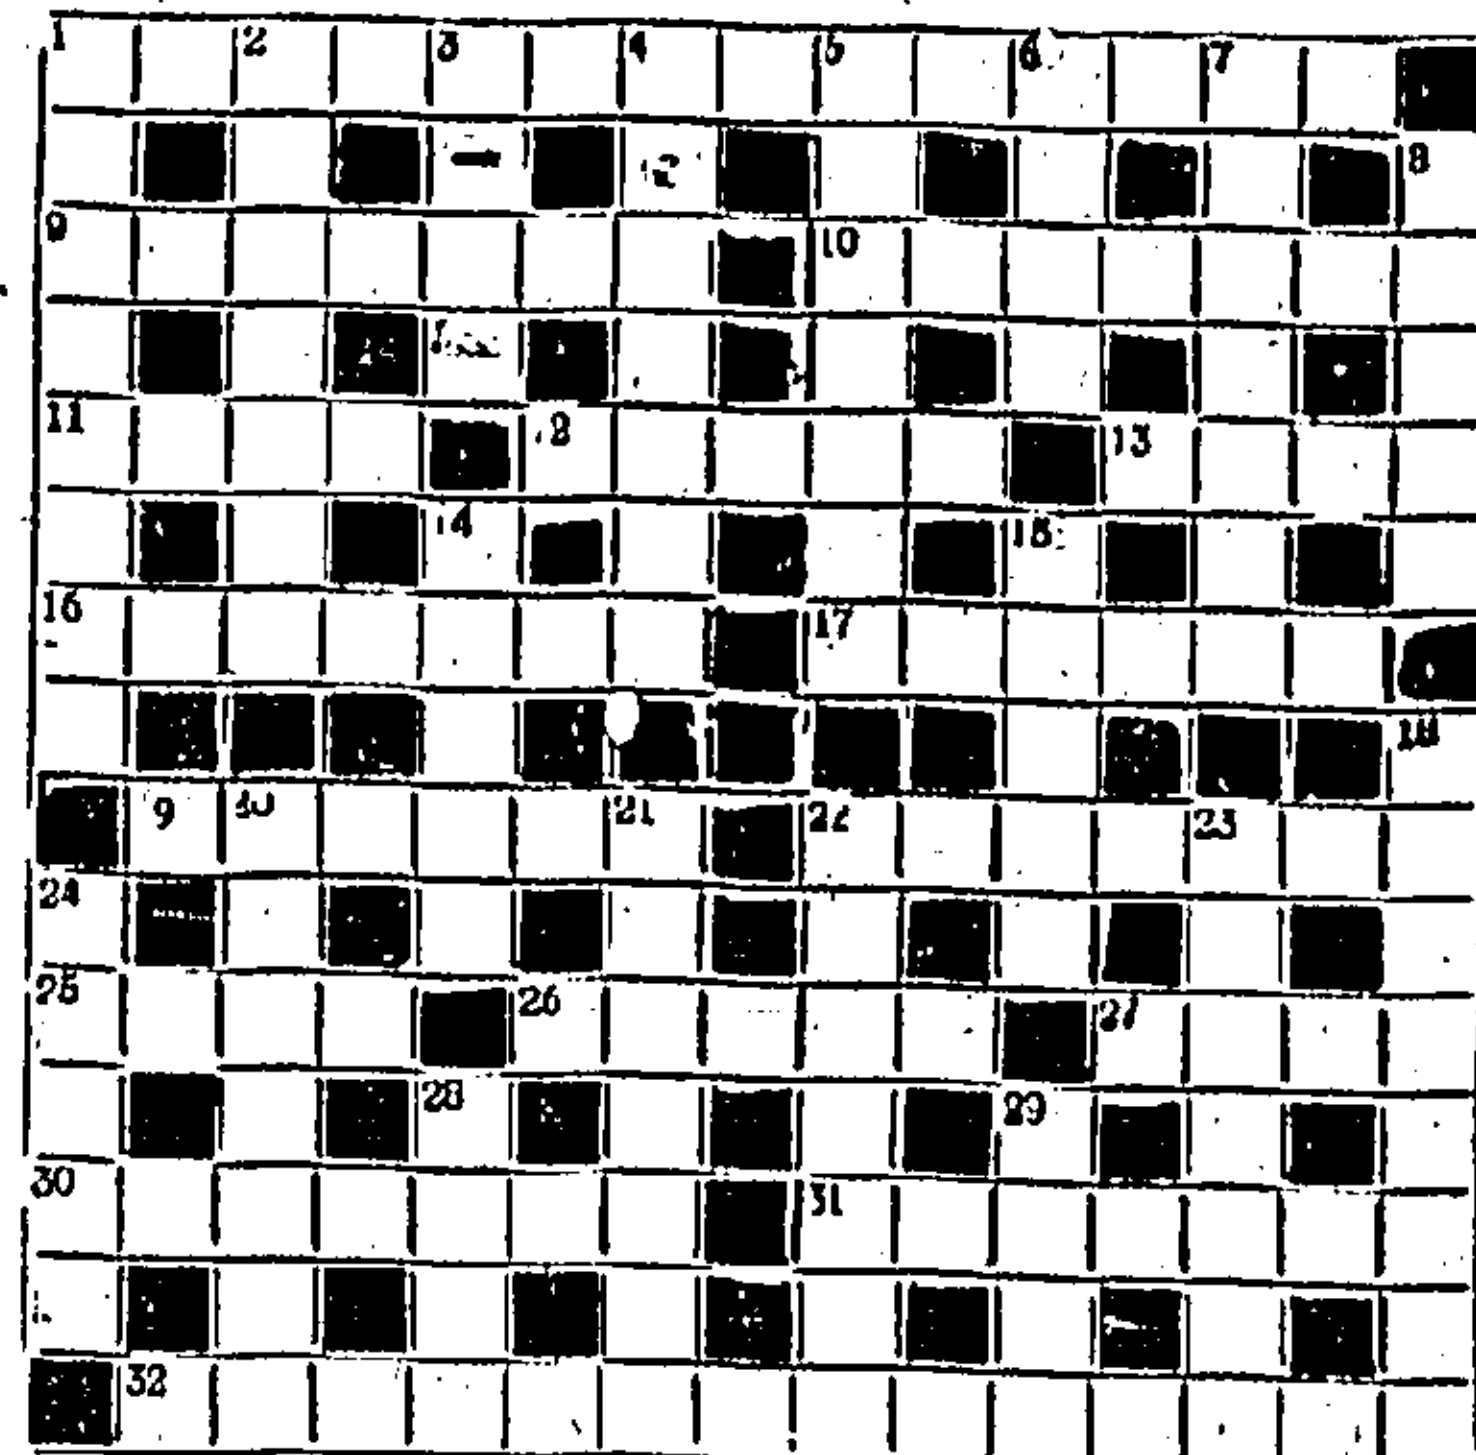

A lower waistline, diagonally cut skirts with no pleats or godets, short cape sleeves in one with the bodice, and a slightly bloused waist, are salient features of the dress of to-morrow.

The newest frock of all has a fitted bodice which develops without seams to a cape on the shoulders, making short, full sleeves. The waist is belted by a thick strip of narrow leather. The skirt moulds the hips, and the required fullness is provided by the clever diagonal cut.

While the new sleeves are frivolous and full, the new necklines are exceedingly modest and almost puritanical to the average spectator. We shall appear to have gone suddenly either demurely modest or effectively ecclesiastical, with tab and bib-like collars, long, white, vest-like plastrons and deep cuffs, always in white, either of silk or pique. Some of these high collars tie at the back and the ends hang down to the back of your waistline.

Paris. Shirred sleeves are new, and those with very much reduced balloon puffs are also worn. Sleeves with fur trimming placed on the upper part are many.

GREAT NEW MYSTERY SERIAL

"WEEK-END MURDER"
BY GABRIEL E. FORBUSH

CHAPTER XXIII.

De Vos's manner was cool, almost indifferent. He seemed to be making conversation. Nevertheless a little trickle of fear went up Linda's spine at the suggestion underlying the random phrases. Tom's words came back to her. "Not off the grounds," he had said. "In the boat."

"I often take the wheel," she answered quite calmly, "but I'm no mechanic and scared to death of engines. Tom manages that." "And I suppose, like most men, he would be enraged if another were to attempt the task in his absence." Still the offhand, casual tone but for the moment Linda was utterly incapable of an answer. Instinctively she looked toward the house and his eyes followed hers. She saw him glance up toward the balcony and then knew by his expression that his thoughts had shifted to another subject. She could safely introduce the theme so much in her own mind. He spoke first, however, soberly but without constraint.

"I see you have already mended the balcony railing. A shocking accident, Madame!—I beg you to believe I am indeed sorry that it occurred."

"Thank you." The ring of sincerity in his voice touched her. After all, it was foolish to think, just because he was interested in boats—as was everyone else on the bay—that he meant to take her, alone, out on the water. "It was shocking. Terrible! I can hardly believe now that it really happened. We live so uneventfully here and the place looks, even now, so peaceful. No," she went back to answer his question. "The break is not really mended. Someone seems to have put the upper railing back into place. That is all."

"Ah, yes, I see now. Several of the lower bars are still out of alignment. Have you—" (he hesitated as though wondering whether the subject might be too painful) "any idea how it happened? You—"

"I was there, you mean?" Aside from her desire to lead the talk back to the tragedy, Linda felt a surge of pure relief to speak about it openly. Seeing this, he relaxed his evident caution lest he distress or displease her. "No. I don't know what happened, Mr. De Vos. It's been told me, just as if I'd been miles away."

"Ah! We found you—unconscious—"

The evident sympathy warmed her. She could speak freely to this now entirely attentive, courteous, understanding person. She thought fleetingly how much more natural Europeans were in any approach to trouble or unhappiness, which all too often tongue-tied the average self-conscious American.

"Yes—in my cousin's room. But I was downstairs when it happened. You know," she hesitated, remembering the events on the club porch, then plunged ahead, "he was to have left the house early this morning. When we got home after the dance it was so horribly hot and so nearly morning that Tom and I thought we'd cool off with a dip instead of trying to go to bed. Tom went on down ahead of me. I came out on the terrace and—"

Her voice faltered. "Just as I did so, Cousin Amos must have fallen overhead. He—his body hit the terrace right in front of me."

"You say 'his body.' He was dead—?"

"Not then. At least, his eyelids moved. That's why I left him. I rushed indoors for help—"

"You are very courageous, you

American women. No screaming, no fainting!"

"Well, not then." Linda remembered what was supposed to have happened. She must tell her story as she and Tom had agreed—sticking as closely to the truth as possible, but leaving out what must on no account be revealed to anyone, even this attentive, sympathetic listener. "I should have called out, perhaps. But I simply felt I must do something! I hurried upstairs blindly—his door was open and that must have startled me, though it's hazy now when I try to remember. Going to that room was partly force of habit. When Tom's aunt lived here we always had it when we visited and after we moved in we were there for a long time while the rest of the house was being decorated. Anyhow—when I saw the broken railing—" She flung out her hands with an expressive gesture.

"That is such a natural psychology," the man nodded slowly. "So often it is the symbol of a thing rather than the actual occurrence which shocks us. You kept your head wonderfully in the face of the accident itself, but the suggestion of the torn railings—"

"Yes, I hadn't thought of it that way. But even now I feel cold and tremble when I remember how I stood there and looked at that broken place. Everything got black and sort of rushed at me—I felt as if I were choking for breath—"

"It is not a pleasant feeling—to faint!"

"It's horrible! I've only fainted once before in my life and that was so long ago I'd forgotten how it felt. That awful sensation of strangling—" Involuntarily her hands went to her throat.

"Ah?" She noticed a return to the polite boredom of his previous manner and recollected suddenly that no man enjoyed a detailed description of ailments and symptoms.

"Then you came to my rescue— all of you," she added to explain the personal pronoun as his eyebrows lifted. He laughed easily. "My dear Mrs. Averill, there was no need for rescue. Your very good friend, Mr. Pratt, had already lifted you as Mr. Statlander and I came in. We could only offer assistance. Then when your husband came, he naturally took command."

"Poor Tom! He must have been terribly upset!"

A reminiscent smile twisted the corners of the Belgian's grave mouth. "Yes—ah—Mr. Averill was considerably upset. He ran upstairs dripping from the water, so he was obliged to waive the very delightful duty of carrying you to your room in favour of Mr. Pratt. I believe he yielded his privilege with some reluctance."

"Oh!" Nobody had told Linda this. It somewhat explained the stiffness between the two men. Poor Tom! It must have been annoying to have to permit—in fact, request—Marvin to carry her to her room and doubtless he had not been any too gracious about it. She was glad she had made this minor discovery. It seemed to be about all she had gleaned from the present conversation.

"I hope you had a little sleep between coming back from the Club and the accident this morning," he said. "I'm sorry your rest was so disturbed."

"Like you, I preferred not to retire," he answered. "The night was hot but there was a slight breeze off the water and I made myself comfortable in the chair by the window and dozed off there. I must in fact have gone soundly asleep, for I did not hear your cousin's fall. Your own, inside the house, sounded faintly through my confused dreams—and then I heard steps and voices which thoroughly roused me. Mr. Pratt, in fact, left his room with such—such vigor and haste that it would have roused any sleeper."

"Marvin does move energetically when he's in a hurry." Linda smiled at the picture his words suggested. "But he's always dependable when anything goes wrong."

The Belgian's lifted eyebrows disclaimed any advantage in the trait.

"A person of great intensity," he commented. "For myself, I find such virile heartiness fatiguing."

Perhaps Linda answered sensibly. Perhaps her reply was what it seemed to her own ears, a feeble and meaningless croak.

For, facing toward the house, she had suddenly felt her eyes drawn upward. In that second, at the closed window of the nursery, she saw a face. Though it instantly moved back to dissolve in the shadows of the room behind there was no mistaking the iron grey of the hair, the strong features, especially the prominent jaw. Marvin Pratt in the nursery—looking down at them on the lawn—and, most important, pulling back quickly out of sight the moment she looked toward him.

Why should he be there? Was he spying on her? Or—the balcony communicating with the other room—

She seemed to be whirling through space. The world was a dizzy unreality and she longed only for sanctuary and safety. Then she steeled, realizing that De Vos had noticed neither the apparition nor her distress. Desperately she tried to think of some obvious remark to cloak her panic. Accident saved her. Through the casement door came Statlander, followed by Tom. At the same moment Rosie emerged from behind the bushes and came toward her. The earth became stable again—it was time for tea.

CINEMA "SHOTS" AND "SEQUENCES"

SOUTH SEAS ROMANCE
FAMOUS STAGE SUCCESS COMES TO CENTRAL AS
SPECTACULAR TALKING FILMDOLORES DEL RIO AND JOEL MCRAE
IN "BIRD OF PARADISE"

WHILE there are beautiful foreign artists like Dolores del Rio in Hollywood there will always be films like The Bird of Paradise, a Radio version of the stage success due at the Central on Sunday. It matters not if the girl be a typical Latin type; a string of beads and a minimum of clothing to drape round her supple form is sufficient to transform her into a Polynesian—and there is the necessary sex appeal for the story.

The Bird of Paradise was not the first story of the beautiful young savage South Sea Island girl who fell in love with the rich American; nor will it be the last; but of all of them, it seems the least ephemeral. It must be nearly 20 years since the story hit the New York stage and broke long-distance records; it had additional publicity in the prolonged litigation over the copyright and was revived, again and again. Now it has come again, in sound-film, a little different from the original plot, but with magnificent photographic shots of South Sea Island scenery to add to its appeal.

The re-action of the time-worn plot on 1933 audiences should be interesting. It is romance of the highest degree, and in these days of blasé cinema audiences, it is doubtful if it is romance that convinces or appeals. Joel McCrea, who appears to be the present requirement in masculine sex appeal, plays the wealthy American on the yachting cruise. He becomes infatuated with Dolores, a fascinating little lady, snatches her from the very arms of her tribal lover, and then goes native for a month or so. The climax is reached when the tribe drag the pair off to appease the wrath of the active volcano. Naturally they are saved on the very brink of the crater, but the civil returns to make the sacrifice.

A comparatively small portion of the film is occupied by the telling of the tale. For the most part it is an exhibition of photography, rivaling those excellent shots that featured Tabin. Submarine cameras have turned out several feet of the film, and an artistic hand has been responsible for the shots through dense foliage and tropical palms.

A big cast does little but add the background; Joel McCrea and Dolores del Rio are in practically every scene and do their best to make the story seem convincing, but it is a big task. It is not claimed that the film was taken in the South Seas, and although the scenes are realistic, an incongruous note is the incidental music of orchestral instruments. One also wonders where the army of technical advisers were: Kanaka maidens don't generally have daintily manicured finger nails, even if they are princesses, and the coconut palm down which Joel McCrea slides as if it were a greasy pole, must have been a unique arboreal specimen.

CLAUDETTE Colbert provides the feminine interest in "The Phantom President," due at the King's on Sunday. George M. Cohan, famous American humorist, makes his first talking film appearance in the leading dual role.

HOLLYWOOD is not alone in making films from literary classics. Now Europe is trying its hand, and on nothing less than Cervantes' Don Quixote. The film is yet uncompleted, but a busy time is forecast for the press agents and writers of puff-paragraphs, for the greatest men from the four corners of the earth appear to have been gathered together for the production.

The Knight of the Doleful Countenance is played by Feeder Chaliapin, Russian opera singer whose basso has boomed out on thousands of gramophone records and who has inflicted his dynamic personality in practically every country of the world. Don Quixote is his favourite story, and if the film follows the opera, he should know the part at least.

And who is Sancho Panza, the gallant Knight's faithful follower? Why, none other than England's favourite, George Robey. Strange as it may seem, George Robey has shed the bowler hat and female attire that has made him so popular in London, and straddles an ass.

At the head of affairs as director of production is G. W. Pabst, German artist of artists, whose name is generally spoken in whispers as the world's greatest master of cinema. He was responsible for Four Infants, the German film screened here last year.

Robey has just returned from the south of France, where the film was made because of the suitability of the climate for filming. He returned with a full tide of invective against the climate and a full tide of enthusiasm for the work he was engaged on.

The film is being made in French and English, Chaliapin playing in both.

"I had to grow a beard and whiskers" said Robey in an interview on his return. "I started them a week before I left London. When they were half-grown—when I was merely seven days unshaven—I looked awful. When I arrived at the Nice hotel, and the reception-clerk asked me where I came from, for purposes of registration, I said 'Devil's Island.' Later, when they were all grown, and I was walking about the town in a washman's frock, the girl called me 'Edouard Sont.'"

"Pabst is wonderful as a director with him the artist is nothing! It is all the film! Chaliapin, Lyan one else—were nothing." His cameramen and the actors as a whole are the chief considerations. I am a photographer myself, and a jolly good one; but I can tell you that the work of that camera-man

Dolores del Rio and Joel McCrea as Liana the heroine and Johnny Baker, her hero, respectively in "BIRD OF PARADISE," RKO-Radio Picture.

FILM INSTITUTE

English Organisation to be Formed

(who works hand in glove with Pabst) was marvellous. Someone who has seen the 'rushes' (the uncut version) in Paris, tells me that the photography is the finest that any film has ever had.

At last, after much parley and speculation, the long-talked-of National Film Institute is about to become a fact writes C.A. Lejaune in the London Observer. Within the next month a provisional scheme of its activities is likely to be published, and a skeleton organisation will have been formed to make appointments and direct the policy of the inaugural work. It is expected that the scheme will have direct Government sanction, as well as the cooperation of the three official representative bodies of the film trade, the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, the Kinematograph Renters' Society, and the Film Producers' Section of the Federation of British Industries. Mass meetings throughout the country have already secured the goodwill of various public bodies, and educationists generally have welcomed the idea of such a practical liaison between the cinema and the school.

Those who have opposed the Film Institute, or ignored it, or shelved its consideration in the past, may just as well accept the fact of its existence now. There will be a Film Institute, and just how valuable that Institute will be to the nation generally, and the film trade in particular, depends on the course which is adopted by all parties in the initial stages of the scheme.

The Institute is to be inaugurated under the control of a provisional constitution, with a Board of Governors of a nominated rather than a formally representative nature, drawn partly from the trade, partly from the educational bodies, and partly, it is hoped, from the Government. This Board of Governors will be small, probably nine in number, but will have the power to co-opt, and to create representative machinery on a larger scale. It will also determine the scope of the Institute during the first year's work, and go a long way towards directing its ultimate policy. It will be seen, therefore, that the choice of the right men for this provisional board is a matter of first-rate importance. They must be representative, not only of the best, but of the widest interest, both of the trade and the nation, and they must carry the fullest confidence of their parties. The gravity of this initial representation, particularly in the case of the cinematograph trade, can hardly be over-estimated. For these men are going to carry the practical burden of a scheme which may look excellent on paper, but which in the working out will need endless adjustment, extension and organisation if it is to perform any useful function to the nation at large.

There is still an idea in certain sections of the film trade that the Institute is a purely academic affair which need not concern them. There is also an idea in the more conservative circles of education that the goodwill of the film trade is a small and inconsiderable factor in an essentially educational scheme. Both these ideas are profoundly wrong. The practical co-operation of the film trade, in its three aspects of producer, renter, and exhibitor, is the one essential fact of the whole scheme. In the end, every suggestion put forward by the Institute will come down to a matter of raw stock, of sound equipment, of apparatus, and of studio floorspace. The men who control these will in fact determine the success of the Institute, however the authority may be allocated on paper.

The whole affair in the end resolves itself into this very simple question of facts. There will very shortly be a Film Institute, which will have some kind of trade representation. Unless that representation is sound, and backed by the full confidence of its members, the Institute will be a paper organisation only, with limited academic function and a very problematic term of existence. But if the trade as a whole will co-operate, and appoint fully authorised representatives to the board, the Institute may very well become the nucleus of a large national organisation, operating ultimately under Royal Charter, and involving multiple interests of commerce, education, industry, and public life.

WHY CHENG SHOULD NOT DIE

But for a deficiency in the Colony's Code of Criminal Procedure, it is possible that Cheng Kwok-yau, a petitioner for whose reprieve has been refused by the Governor-in-Council, would not have to pay the full penalty of the law. We refer to the non-existence of a Court of Criminal Appeal. The creation of such a Court locally has been mooted for some considerable time, but it still remains to be brought into being. Unfortunately, the intention to create it is of no value to a convicted man. If such a Court existed, it would have been possible for Cheng's counsel to have brought before it a large number of facts and submissions which could not be presented to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council at Home, even had leave to appeal been granted. The whole case would, in fact, have been thoroughly reviewed, whereas all that has been possible has been to seek to induce the Privy Council to hear an appeal, in which connexion it is to be borne in mind that this body has a marked reluctance to being regarded as a Court of Criminal Appeal. We stress this point because, with such a Court in being locally, Cheng would automatically have had a right to appeal. In its absence, he is shut out from a privilege which is enjoyed in England and which before long may also obtain here. But there are other reasons why considerations of clemency might have been allowed to prevail. First and foremost in the evidence definitely linking Cheng with the crime; secondly, the admittedly tainted character of much of that evidence; and, thirdly, the surprising brevity of the Judge's summing-up and the directions to the jury. These points, there can be little doubt, would have weighed heavily with any Court of Appeal. The only semblance of an appeal which Cheng enjoyed was the discussion of reserved points of law before the Full Court, on which, in accordance with local procedure, the Trial Judge had a seat. Issues of fact could not come before that Court. There is a further point worthy of mention, namely, that juries in Hongkong consist of only seven members, as compared with twelve at Home. This is obviously to the detriment of a man on trial for his life. A necessary reform, at least in murder cases, would appear to be an enlargement of the jury. If it be pleaded that larger juries would inflict a hardship on the business community, this can be countered by the suggestion of extending jury service to women, large numbers of whom found ample time to sit through the greater part of the Cheng trial. The conclusion to be drawn from the Cheng case is that our Code of Criminal Procedure badly stands in need of overhaul. Putting the general issue on one side, however, we cannot but feel that it will be wrong for Cheng to pay the full penalty. There is a tendency in some quarters to press for the due execution of the law because of the condemned man's reputed wealth. Whilst no-one wishes to see it made possible for riches to buy immunity from punishment, by the same token they should not have the effect of jeopardising a man's life. In view of the special and peculiar features of the case, we feel, even at this the eleventh hour, that the ends of justice would be met by a commutation of the death sentence.

Forty-Hour Week

The British Government's effort to stifle discussion at the International Labour Conference on a proposal for a universal forty-four week hardly fits in with Mr. Ramsay MacDonald's claim that the Cabinet are endeavouring to take the long view in dealing with the unemployment problem. The British delegate could be forgiven for arguing that the proposal is impracticable—though it seems to us a question of will and determination above all else—but when he declared that, presuming an agreement was reached, a convention drawn up and ratified, it would have little material influence on unemployment, he talked so much nonsense. The subject does not require to be discussed at any length. A Government spokesman, broadcasting in England quite recently, pointed out that even if, by some magic, the depression was suddenly lifted and all business enterprises resumed full capacity production, there would still be nearly two millions unemployed in Britain. The President of the American Federation of Labour has reached a similar conclusion. A return of prosperity to American industry would still leave, in present conditions, three or four million men without employment. This situation has been brought about by the development of labour-saving devices which are still being produced. Unless we devise a system whereby consumption can be made to keep pace with productive capacity, there will always be scrambling for international markets and the cycle of boom and depression will swing higher and lower. While this has probably struck few people, the so-called dole has proved an economic blessing in disguise in Great Britain. It has sustained the purchasing power of the workers and thereby maintained consumption at a much higher level than it could have achieved had the people been left to starve. The ball would have been set rolling like a snowball, unemployment gathering speed, until probably 75 per cent. of the people would have been idle. But the present problem is to get those people now out of work back into employment and if there is no prospect for them in a resumption of full industrial output, there must be a departure from the reactionary attitude revealed at Geneva on Wednesday. A forty-hour week merely means that six people would do the work of five under the forty-eight-hour week system. Twelve millions would be in employment as against ten millions. It might not work out quite so easily as this; it might be necessary to work down to a 32-hour week to achieve the desired effect. The wages question does not offer insuperable difficulties. Too big a proportion of industrial remuneration goes into the pockets of people who can afford, in normal times, to re-invest instead of spending. To improve consumption levels, spending is essential—State pensions at a certain age would remove one of the incentives to old age. Fear of destitution in old age. Much of this may seem idealistic—or Socialistic—but surely the depression has been deep enough to shake industrialists out of their old ideas of the relations between Capital and Labour.

OTTAWA AND OUR FAIR

By SIR GILBERT C. VYLE

(Sir Gilbert Vyle was one of Great Britain's industrial advisers at the Imperial Economic Conference.)

We were on the threshold of Ottawa when last year's British Industries Fair opened. The moment was one of drama, because, although many of us had already a shrewd notion of Ottawa's effect upon the nations who are our customers, there were others who doubted.

Would the foreign buyers shun the Fair?

They overwhelmed it. The throng of them arriving from overseas was more than twice the size of that which came in 1931.

To-day we have crossed the threshold. The Ottawa agreements are the world's property; and he would be a doubter indeed who could persuade himself that next month's British Industries Fair will not be the better for them.

The B. I. F. Shows How to Balance Trade.

The Continent is queuing up. Already sixteen European countries are giving their buyers special concessions to come to Britain for the occasion. And why? Schwab, the steel magnate, has estimated that the agreements mean to countries outside the Empire a trade loss of between thirty and forty million pounds a year.

The Continent grows a trifle scared. They are realising Britain's enormous buying power and fear they are going to lose some of the trade which they have had in the past. But they know that they will not lose it all. We expressly declared at Ottawa that we were prepared to consider preferential and reciprocal trade with any country outside the Empire on terms perhaps not quite as good as those given within the Empire yet considerably better than they would be if no trade agreement were reached.

Imagine the national urge in each of the Continental producers everywhere getting together and impressing on their Governments the need to encourage purchases from Britain before this great market of theirs vanishes under their eyes.

The time has gone when they could without any control send us products of any kind and price without the slightest intention of taking payment for them in British goods and services on equally favourable terms.

In the past we have never had the machinery to control such a situation. Ottawa has given us that machinery and the British Industries Fair is performing an incalculable service in showing nationals of trading countries who in the past have missed their opportunity how to use it in the future by coming here and helping to achieve a more just balance of trade between us and them.

It was Ottawa that showed the way.

What the Dominions Feared. The Dominions themselves are already old friends of the Fair both as exhibitors and buyers. In February they will all be there again either under the auspices of the Empire Marketing Board or in the fine displays set up for themselves by Canada and India.

As buyers, I am convinced, in the Ottawa agreements, that the Fair will be a memorable demonstration of how the Dominions may profit by the really colossal range of Britain's production power.

I may explain that, while negotiating the new tariffs, one of the recurring difficulties which we had with the Dominions was their fear that the products we wished to sell to them were exactly those they themselves manufactured.

If that were so, naturally they could not have bought from us without putting out of work certain of their own people now engaged in making such products.

I need not say that in fact we were under no illusions on the question. We realised clearly that, where a Dominion could produce a stock line as cheaply as we could, it would be the proper thing for it to carry out its own production.

On the other hand, if variety of production were the aim, a special line for the Dominion to manufacture might very well be a bread and butter line for a firm at home, producing in large quantities. Here we felt that it was better for everybody that Britain should manufacture efficiently in large quantities than that a Dominion should manufacture inefficiently in small quantities. In this way the people of the Dominion themselves would be able to buy a special line more cheaply from Britain and increase their purchasing power to that extent, so enabling them to buy either more goods manufactured in their own Dominion or more from Great Britain, thus allowing Great Britain in turn to buy more from the Dominions.

Salesmen Are the Statesmen's Allies.

A textile mill in Canada might be able to produce cloth for suitings as good in every way, including price, as those to be bought from Great Britain. But men are like women in that all of them do not want to be dressed in the same pattern of a fabric, like a row of policemen. They prefer a change. But the Canadian mill which could efficiently turn out substantial quantities of a stock fabric would become inefficient when meeting small demands for special patterns; and the Canadian people would be paying prices out of all proportion to those asked for a supply from Britain.

Clearly, it would be foolish to attempt to compete with the vast range of patterns which we would be able to send out to them from Britain. We on our part admit that they can make the stock lines as efficiently as we can; they on their side grant that the making of special lines is our heritage and our business.

The Fair is Britain's shop window for the display of all such out-of-the-way things; and I would ask those who come from the Dominions, or who send their agents to the Fair, to look out for Britain's special lines.

And meanwhile let the British manufacturer be on the alert in anticipation of the visitors who will be arriving at Olympia, the White City and Castle Bromwich. Products outside the stock range carry so much higher a rate of profit that an intensive study of the subject will pay him well, and, if he will con the Ottawa schedules, he will discover just which lines have now an improved chance overseas.

Let him give prominence to them at the Fair and let him encourage the people on his stand to study the schedules too and thus be able to clinch sales with definite knowledge of landed costs under the new arrangement.

If the salesmen of Britain back up the statesmen of Britain, the alliance cannot fail to pull us through.

The Very Idea!

INTELLIGENTZIA

By Edward Kelly, Mountaineer.

Believe it or not, we are now quite definitely residing on the Peak.

After that wies-crack about Intelligent People we thought that our time was simply wasted at Kowloon. So we shifted.

Between shivers we are going to set out, for the information of the Kowloon proletariat, our impressions of the upper strata.

Our heart is in the Highlands, but our toes must be somewhere else. Every now and then we take our boots off and count our toes to make sure they are not frozen off and lying about loose.

Our first night here was so cold we couldn't yodel. We were in bed with the whole works on top of us. At 2 a.m. we got up and pulled the carpet over ourself.

About 2.30 a.m. we pulled the wardrobe over us, and from then on we were fairly comfortable.

We were told this morning that the air up here is very rare. That's why the V. B. P. always have their noses in the air.

Our first day here we met three bankers, one ship-owner, eleven Government talpans and the Peak Hotel.

We sort of forget who else we met after the Peak Hotel. We met everybody. That is, everybody who counts. Including all the Intelligent Parents.

We felt sorry for all those poor people living in Kowloon. Nothing to look forward to but dances, tennis, golf, football, cricket, hockey and poker games. No social standing at all.

Speaking of Kowloon ..... Sorry, we forgot it was not spoken about up here.

SOCIAL TRAGEDY.

Before, he was one of the most popular members of our Set.

Girls fought for the privilege of dancing with him. Now even his Best Friend avoids him.

What has made them all drop him from their parties and their pastimes?

He idly turns over the pages of a magazine as he wonders. His eyes fall on an advertisement.

Surely not. Cool Lord! It cannot be! "The insidious thing about B.O.", he reads, "is that you yourself are not aware of it. Even your best friend won't tell you."

So that was it. As the awful realisation penetrated his mind, he groaned aloud. B.O. of all things. He must button-hole Kelly and ask him. Kelly, his Best Friend, would tell him if asked point-blank.

"Teddy", he asked us that night, "why is everyone avoiding me. Is it B.O.?"

"No, Pete", we replied, "it's not that. But for heavens sake, old man, go easy on the Lifebuoy!"

TOO DRASTIC!

And would you believe it, we've just had a letter from the D-pity C-1-n-1 Tr-s-r-r, informing us that our economy programme is a washout.

It's sheer jealousy, of course. But bang goes our O.B.E.

THE PORPOISE.

A porpoise was seen in the Harbour yesterday. The first man to see it has been on dry ginger ever since. The second thought it was a shark and rang up the Stock Exchange to see if any were missing. A third rang up the Water Police, the Harbour Master and, The Editor of The Critic. It was generally agreed that Percy the Porp. was acting out of all order, ultra vires, ipso facto, and against Sections 1 to 48 of the Aliens Restriction Ordinance.

THE DAUGHTER OF PARLIAMENTS.

How happy Ireland is now she can revive the great traditions of her ancient Parliament. A casual reader of the Irish Hansard sends us a few gems of Celtic eloquence picked out of that rich mine at haphazard. As for example: Mr. Corry: Throw the Deputy a turnip.

Mr. Anthony: You are the low Liverpool coward you always were.

Mr. Gorey: Deputy Corry was merely using his natural language, the language of the baboon.

Mr. Corry: When the menagerie ceases interrupting me I will carry on.

Mr. Dillon: It is a damned lie. Mr. Coburn: If he was a young man I would kill him, where he stands for what he has said.

The Deputy Speaker: ... But when a Deputy rises and charges another Deputy that he is after saying what is a damned lie, the dignity of this House is in question. (Somebody faints).

"Seen a package about so big? I'm expecting something from my sister in Devonshire."

LANCASHIRE'S
OUTLOOKIMPROVEMENT IN YARN EXPORTSCOMPLAINTS AGAINST JAPAN

London, Jan. 12. British exports of cotton yarn in 1932 exceeded the volume of either of the two previous years, states the annual report of the Yarn Section of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce.

India, Rumania and China accounted for the most important increases. The boycott of Japanese goods by China doubtless resulted in an improved demand for Lancashire yarns.

The report, referring to the increases in the German duties on cotton yarns, stated that the action had given a serious setback to Lancashire spinning interests and that the Board of Trade had been approached on the matter.

The report of the Near Eastern Section of the Manchester Chamber refers to the increasingly keen competition from Japan and elsewhere and says that the totally uneconomic selling prices of Japanese goods was proving one of the greatest obstacles to Lancashire's prosperity in Egypt and other important markets such as Turkey and Iraq.—Reuter.

WILL HOCKEY DECLINE?

The return game with the Midway Officers' team on the R.N.O.R.C. ground, King's Park, when the teams met at Canton a few weeks ago the officers won by four goals to two in a closely contested game. Shamoon will be without the services of two of their regular players, Von Essen, centre-half, and J. Andrews, inside right. Frank Lammert, who usually plays on the left flank will deputise for Andrews in which position he will partner his brother, Oswald Lammert.

FRANK Lammert was a great disappointment in the game between the Club and the Navy on Wednesday when it is remembered that he was picked for the Canadian team in the Olympics last year.

MACAO are to be favoured with the visit of yet another Hongkong team in the Royal Signals, who have one of the strongest sides in the Mank tournament and are at present at the head of the table. The game is to be played on Sunday and the Signals team will be as follows: Brown, Whitehead, Corb, Austen, Jones, Scott, Bryce, Chaffey, Lint, Whiteway-Wilkinson, Convey and Cavill.

FARMER'S HUT
RAIDEDROBBERS MAKE SMALL
HAUL

Armed robbers are reported to have made their appearance at Taipekau, in the New Territories, in the small hours of this morning, when they raided a hut tenanted by a farmer, and escaped with a small sum of money and a few articles of clothing.

The farmer, his sister, and his 17-year-old son were asleep when they were aroused by the entry of three men, who, armed with choppers, made threatening and suggestive passes across their throats with the weapons. With the victims reduced to abject submission, the robbers went ahead with their enterprise, and when they finally left the house had divested the place of all articles of value it held.

Thongs and one of the choppers were picked up afterwards on a pathway leading from the house to the Railway Station, showing that the robbers went along the railway line in a westerly direction on fleeing.

SUBSIDISED
SHIPPINGBRITISH SUPER-TAX
ADVOCATED

London, Jan. 12. Mr. W. L. Hitchens, Chairman of Cammell Lairds, the well-known British firm of shipbuilders, when launching a new Mersey ferry today, called attention to the serious competition British shipping was experiencing from the subsidised shipping of other nations. He said at the present time shipping belonging to other important countries was receiving £30,000,000 yearly in subsidies. He expressed the view that if a super-tax was placed on every subsidised ship entering an Imperial port, these payments would soon cease.—British Wireless.

WILL WITHDRAWAL OF SIM SHIELD MEAN HOCKEY DECLINE?

NEW POSITION TO BE FACED BY MAMAK TOURNAMENT.

FEATURES OF WEEK-END PROGRAMME

(BY "BULLY OFF")

WHETHER the decisions of the Sim Shield committee, and the Mamak tournament committee will have a detrimental effect on the game of hockey in the Colony remains to be seen. It has been suggested to me that such moves by these two bodies will tend to lessen interest in the game. Personally, I see no reason for this if those participating are playing for the game's sake and not for the "Pot" at the end of it.

THE decision of the Army, Navy and Club on Wednesday to abolish the Sim Shield altogether may mean that the Mamak committee will have to do likewise in regard to their trophy to bring them into line with the ruling of the English Hockey Association, to which several of the clubs concerned owe allegiance.

It is between the Army and Navy officials, for if they make no move and are content that the Mamak committee are conforming with the Homeside Association rules the competition will continue as it is at present, namely, that the trophy be lodged in a certain place and removed only for the purpose of inscribing the name of the winning team on it.

If they decide that the teams in the competition are playing in contravention to the rules of the Association then they will have no alternative but to ask the Service units to cancel their entry or the Mamak committee to fall in line with the decision regarding the Sim Shield.

THE coming week-end should prove to be one of the most successful as far as hockey is concerned since the beginning of the season. Hockey enthusiasts will have a galaxy of games to watch, all of which should be productive of a high standard of hockey. The programme includes the clash between the Incegnitos and H.M.S. Medway in the Mamak tournament on the Marina ground. The Incegnitos enjoy an unbeaten record in the competition, having won all the games they have played. They have also the best goal average—an aggregate of 30 goals for and only three against. The Medway has not fared so well as several of their players have been on the injured list. On Saturday, however, they will be able to field their strongest eleven. During the past two months they have had to play with a depleted side as Hawgood, their centre forward and Allen have been kept from the game through injuries. They are now reported fit again and will be included in the team for Saturday.

THE teams will be as follows:

INCEGNITOS: A.E.P. Silva; F.G. Incegnito; E.V. Reid; P.M.N. Silva; W.A. Reid; F.M. Silva; G.E. Barros; J.M. Pinto; C.C. Francis; R. C. Reid and A.P. Souza.

MEDWAY: Evans; Robertson; Rhodes; Wisdom; Dunn; Hodges; Nosworthy; Hawgood; Holmes; Lewis and Allen.

THE other Mamak matches will be between the Radio and the Parthian, and in this game the odds are in favour of the Radio, although the Parthian have been playing very good hockey of late; and between the Phoenix and the German Club at Caroline Hill. It would not come as a big surprise if the German Club held the navy men to a draw.

THE O.B.A. Ladies will make their first appearance this season when they oppose St. Andrew's in the Car Clark cup competition at King's Park on Saturday. It will be remembered

PREPARING FOR SOCCER INTERPORT

PROBLEM FOR SELECTORS

NEED FOR INSIDE FORWARDS

NAVY'S GOOD SHOWING

(By "Veritas").

Although they had seen nothing to cause them to walk out of the Club ground yesterday with their faces wreathed in jubilation smiles, the Interport football selectors could regard the trial match and its result in a sanguine manner.

The game did not produce any goal, but for the most part the trial team came up to expectations, and on yesterday's display there is little reason to doubt the final selection of players such as Rodgers, Strange, Pardoe, Bliss, Leung Wing-chui and A.V. Gosano.

But the selectors have a left wing problem to solve. Balfry is not worth his place, Blake, the Kowloon forward who opened as his partner yesterday did not impress as being up to Interport standard and Hill, his club colleague left on a similar reaction.

SEAL'S CLAIMS. In grappling with this problem the selectors may find some inspiration from the Lai Wah Cup game to-morrow. It is pretty certain that Ver-non Seal will be closely watched and it is conceivable that he will be brought in for a trial. Although not a bag of tricks like Ip Pak-wa, Seal has several virtues as a left winger, chief among them being his accuracy in middling the ball. He also enjoys a useful turn of speed and has the facility of picking up a pass from any angle.

ARMY MAY WIN

BETTER BALANCED COMBINATION

LEAGUE FEATURES

NEEDLE CAME IN DIVISION 2

(By "Veritas").

The Lai Wah Cup match between the Army and Civilians takes precedence on Saturday, so that there is no programme of first division matches.

The cup teams appear to be extremely well matched, and the outcome is not such that one can forecast with any degree of confidence. Personally I like the chances of the military men. On paper, at least, there is more balance in their team than that of the Civilians. I am rather inclined to doubt the ability of Rodgers, Martin and Strange to prevent the very businesslike Army quintette from scoring goals, whereas the Civilians, although boasting a number of forwards, the Gosano brothers and Pile, will be opposed to a couple of fine backs in Allen and Mullane, and a fairly useful last line of defence in Heath.

There appears to be little to choose between the respective intermediate lines. Both, if on form, will be strong combinations and demanding no little skill to overcome.

ARMY GOAL SCORERS. The Army appear to have a somewhat more potential goal scoring attack than the opposition, with Bryant, Samis and Jones as three very determined inside men.

B. Gosano has not yet proved himself a success at inside left and I believe he is out of position. Hill will have to improve on yesterday's display to cause any worry to the Army rearguard or to constitute an effective attacker for the Civilians.

but it is fairly certain that Pile and Santos on the wings will give of their best, which may have a material effect on the result. Chief interest in the second division programme rests in the meeting of the Lincoln and the Lincoln. The game is at Chatham Road which offers a slight advantage to the soldiers, and after the unexpected reverse of the Chinese against the Artillery last Saturday, it is quite on the cards that the Lincoln will add to this shame.

CHAMPIONSHIP BID BY H.K.C.C.

DEFEAT OF CRAIGENGOWER OF MATERIAL HELP

FEATURES OF LAST WEEK'S CRICKET

(By "The Stumper")

If the Hongkong C. C. win the Senior Shield—and I don't see why they cannot, with their all-round team—they must look back with thankfulness on their match against the Craigengower C.C. at Happy Valley last week. They won and collected three points, which have placed them in a very favourable position in the League, but if the last two men in the Valley side had not so foolishly run themselves out with only a few more minutes to play, they might just as well have chased rainbows for all the chances they would have had of carrying off the trophy.

REPUTED to be a strong bowler and fielding side, the Craigengower attack, with the possible exception of Hubbard, was made to look mediocre. Both Omar and R. Lee showed signs of lack of practice, the former being perhaps more guilty in this respect. His swing, which has proved so difficult to play in the past, was missing, and the Club batsmen were not troubled by him at all. Hubbard did not have much luck, and bowled better than his four wickets for 40 runs suggested. T. A. Pearce (58), A.W. Hayward (44) and H. Owen Hughes (34) were the chief contributors to the Club's score of 163 for seven wickets. Of the three, Hayward's knock was about the best, while Owen Hughes also produced some pretty shots. Pearce was dropped twice off Hubbard and should have been dismissed long before he reached the half-century.

AFTER the first two wickets had taken the score to 72, the rest of the Valley batsmen failed miserably to be all dismissed for 105 runs, of which E. Zimmer, their skipper, made 44. He played a true captain's innings, but received no support whatever. I don't understand why H. P. Lim was placed tenth in the batting order as he usually opens for the Craigengower, and I also fail to understand how he could have been run out in such a silly manner. I certainly would have expected a batsman of his experience to send Hanson back.

THE Civil Service C.C. obtained their first League point in four matches when they drew with the Royal Navy at King's Park. The visitors' attack was weak and the Navy batsmen were not unduly troubled. They proceeded to knock up 169 for four wickets, but could not dismiss the Civil Servants by the time stumps were drawn. Commr. Williams played a good innings for his 50 while Shaw (43) and Mid. Farnhill (36) were the other scorers.

IT was left to B.C.K. Hawkins to save the C.S.C.C. from defeat after the first two wickets had fallen for only one run. Going in sixth, he hit out most gallantly and collected 32, by which time, the others, heartened I expect by his exhibition, made some sort of a stand. They played out time with 132 runs on the board and three wickets in hand.

WITH the juniors, the Civil Service C.C. lost their fifth consecutive game, while the Kowloon C.C. collected three points from the now almost unrecognisable Recreio team. The Hongkong C.C. played their third drawn game, this time against the Craigengower C.C., who have only dropped two points in four matches. The race for championship honours in this division is rather even and should prove very interesting as the season draws to a close.

CINEMA SCREENINGS.

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

Married men... how would you like to be able to disguise yourself sufficiently to make love to your own wives? This situation supplies the reasons for the laughs in the amusing comedy, "The Guardsman," in which Edmund Goulding, director of "Grand Hotel" and Lynn Fontanne are co-starred at the Queen's Theatre from Sunday. In this naughty Continental romance, an actor is very jealous of his wife. He imagines that her interest in him is waning; that she is casting her eyes towards other men. He resolves to test her fidelity. He disguises himself as a rough, vulgar Russian guardsman with a deep guttural voice. As the guardsman, he succeeds in gaining a clandestine rendezvous with his own wife. What happens? Well, of course, it would be a shame to disclose that... for the incidents included provide most of the laughs in this play, which originally packed the Theatre Guild Theatre in New York for over a year. It was the biggest single stage success of Lunt and Fontanne, acknowledged leaders of the current American "legitimate" theatre. Sidney Franklin, who did such a fine job with "The Last of Mrs. Cheyne" and a long list of other hits, directed the picture. The screen version was written by Ernest Vajda, from Ferenc Molnar's original drama, with continuity by Alaudine West.

"The Phantom President"
George M. Cohan for President! That's the resolution that has been adopted by the Hollywood, Breakfast Club, and the New York City Flare Club. And it's not based on the fact that the veteran author, actor, producer and composer is cast in the role of a candidate for President in his first talking picture, "The Phantom President," in which he is featured with Claudette Colbert and Jimmy Durante, and which shortly comes to the King's Theatre. Cohan finds himself in "The Phantom President" in two similar roles—one as a candidate equipped for the business end of the Presidency, but lacking the personality to get votes; and the other as a "dead-finger" for the candidate, equipped with the "goodwill" personality. Miss Colbert is cast as the girl over whom the two Cohans come to odds, and Durante as the pal of the pseudo-candidate.

"Unashamed"
Injured dignity launched Helen Twelvetrees to success on the screen. If a theatrical producer hadn't "kidded" the talkies, and incidentally "kidded" her for considering an offer to appear in them, the heroine of "Unashamed," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's vivid mystery drama now playing at the Queen's Theatre, would probably still be on the New York stage. "I was playing the lead in 'Roulette,'" she replied, "when an offer came from a New York studio to try the talkies. I didn't think much of it at the time, but mentioned it to the producer of the stage show I was in. He roared with laughter, assured me talking pictures couldn't last and told me it was exceedingly funny that I was considering them. Well, that made me a little angry—no I went into a talkie role to show him and it changed my whole career. During her first year in pictures Miss Twelvetrees played small roles, but finally came to Hollywood, where Edmund Goulding, director of "Grand Hotel," cast her in "The Grand Parade," which started her on a brilliant list of performances. Her newest role, as the selfish girl whose heedlessness places her brother in danger of his life, and who is forced to a terrific sacrifice to save him from her folly, is one of the sensational roles of the year. The story is by Bayard Veiller, noted playwright and author of "The Trial of Mary Dugan." "I enjoyed the picture hugely," says Miss Twelvetrees, "because it was a far different type of role from any in my experience."

"Love Me Tonight"
Hollywood put a horse under contract to toss Maurice Chevalier from his back to the ground—as gently as possible. The horse is known simply as Brownie. He got the contract to make a sequence of "Love Me Tonight," Chevalier's latest starring picture, now at the King's Theatre. The sequence shows a hunt at a private country estate. Maurice, in the role of a mere tailor impersonating a baron, and trying his darndest to impress Jeanette MacDonald, a woman of aristocratic family, almost reveals his true identity by his bad riding. His wit, however, saves the day after his spill from the horse, and soon Jeanette has yielded to his charms. But the secret of his identity ultimately comes out anyhow, and then it requires an amusing, but at the same time romantic climax, to straighten things up to everyone's satisfaction.

"The Old Dark House"
Charles Laughton, one of the featured players in "The Old Dark House" at the Central Theatre this week was a hotel clerk in London before the war, though his family wanted him to go in the navy. He did not go on the stage until five years after his war service.

"Bird of Paradise"
RKO Radio's lavishly produced spectacle of Richard Walton Tully's great stage play, "Bird of Paradise," comes to the Central on Sunday. Dolores Del Rio and Joel McCrea are starred. No expense was spared in making this thrilling film, which has been acclaimed as the sensation of the year. It drew repeat audiences year after year in the United States and ran a year in London. It earned its author $500,000.00. It made star after star in its legitimate dramatic career. And now RKO Radio has brought it to the screen in all its glory. Under the direction of that master of directors, King Vidor, it has been made into a wonderful picture—a vivid, spectacular picture of super-appeal; a picture of rare beauty and undying sentiment of this tremendous love story.

SPORTSMAN WEDS

Mrs. NG SZE-KWONG AND MISS LEUNG MEE-YING

A typical sporting atmosphere prevailed at the wedding reception yesterday afternoon of Mr. Ng Sze-kwong and Miss Leung Mee-ying, who were married according to Chinese rites in the morning. The reception at the Gloucester Building was attended by a large and distinguished gathering, the well-wishers of the happy couple including Mrs. Southorn, the wife of the Hon. Mr. W. T. Southorn (Colonial Secretary), Sir William Shenton, Sir William Hornell, Sir Shou-son Chow, Hon. Mr. R. H. Kotewall, and other leading residents.

The main room of Gloucester Building was tastefully decorated for the occasion, and in the middle of the room stood a huge three-tiered wedding cake with the Challenge Cup presented for the Chinese Recreation Club, of which Mr. Ng Sze-kwong is a leading member, resting on the top. On the table on each side of the cake were the two Challenge Cups (presented by the late Sir Paul Chater and Sir Robert Ho Tung respectively), which Mr. Ng Sze-kwong won outright as the singles champion of the Colony, these trophies being used as flower-bowls.

The cake itself was beautifully decorated and on the top of the middle tier was laid out a miniature lawn tennis court.

The bride was attended by the Misses Daisy Leung (sister) and Rosy So, while Messrs. H. K. Lee and H. C. Hunt supported the bridegroom.

The principal toast was proposed by the Hon. Mr. R. H. Kotewall, and the bridegroom suitably replied.

Double Wedding

A pretty double wedding of much social interest was solemnised yesterday afternoon when some well-known Chinese families were united. Miss Daisy Ma, daughter of the late Mr. Ma Po-chan (of Sydney) and Mrs. Ma Po-chan was married to Mr. K. H. Yuen, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Yuen Hi-lam, while Miss Helen

RESCUE WORK

TRIBUTE TO BRITISH SEAMEN

Cherbourg, Jan. 12.
The courage shown by the crew of the British steamer Ford Castle in the rescue work of the crew of the burned French liner Atlantique was specially mentioned by Captain Schoofs, the commander of the Atlantique.

One of the Ford Castle's boats approached within a hundred yards of the fiercely burning liner, picked up three men and took aboard two more who escaped through the portholes. Captain Schoofs writes, "The seamen of the Ford Castle displayed keen knowledge of their calling and their heroism was worthy of the highest rewards."—Our Own Correspondent.

Leung, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Leung, became the bride of Mr. C. I. Yuen, the second son of Mr. and Mrs. Yuen Hi-lam. A reception was held at the Peninsula Hotel, on the Roof Garden which was packed to capacity.

Miss Daisy Ma was given away by her uncle, Mr. Ma Wing-chien, well-known local merchant, and Miss Helen Leung was given away by her grandfather.

Popular Bridegroom

Mr. K. H. Yuen, a worthy product of the University is one of the most popular masters of Queen's College. A keen sportsman in all senses of the word, he is an active member of the Chinese Recreation Club and the University Club. His charming bride Miss Daisy Ma, a pianist of renown needs no introduction in the musical circles of the Colony. Her performances at the Helena May Institute concerts in the past two or three years have invariably met with tremendous success and applause.

Mr. C. I. Yuen, the younger brother, an old boy of the Queen's College, has for the past six years been in the shipping business and is well known in Chinese business circles. His happy bride Miss Helen Leung is teaching in the Lai Chak and Ching Mo Girls Schools. A dinner was held at the Kam Ling Restaurant, West Point last evening, attended by hundreds of guests and relatives.

CAPE AIR SERVICE.

HIG INCREASE IN TRAFFIC
REPORTED

London, Jan. 12.
The Imperial Airways London to Capetown air route, which was established less than a year ago is being operated with remarkable success. There was no vacant seat yesterday in the giant machine which left Croydon on the weekly service, and there are only few vacant seats between now and the end of March. Traffic has increased by nearly 50 per cent in the past three months.

Such is the demand for short trip accommodation on the Alexandria to Capetown sections that a new fleet of machines is being completed. One of these 22 seats is on its way to Capetown with Sir Eric Geddes, Chairman of the Imperial Airways, who is making a tour of inspection.—British Wireless.

LIU RESIGNS.

TO LEAD ARMY AGAINST JAPANESE

Shanghai, Jan. 12.
General Liu Wen-hui, quarrelsome Chinese military commander and Chairman of the Szechuan Provincial Government, who figured prominently in the Szechuan civil wars in the past weeks, has addressed a telegram to the Nanking Government tendering his resignation.

He pledges to mobilise all his followers to leave Szechuan heading for Peking to fight the Japanese. Liu Wen-hui's resignation should dispel all rumors of his army's trying to attack Chang Tu from three directions.—Rensha.

Nanking, Jan. 12.
After reporting on the military situation in Kwangtung to General Chiang Kai-shek, Mr. Yang Teh-chao, representative of General Chen Chi-tang, Commander of the First Group Army, left for Shanghai to day en route for Canton.—Reuter.

SENSATIONAL ENGLAND COLLAPSE IN TEST

R. A. F. DISASTER

HUGE FLYINGBOAT CRASHES

HITS LAUNCH
PLYMOUTH SOUND MISHAP

(Our Own Correspondent).

The flyingboat, Copyright, Telegraph, 1933. Received, January 12, 1933.

London, Jan. 12. A huge Royal Air Force flyingboat, one of the biggest in active service, was wrecked to-day in an accident off Plymouth Sound.

The great machine was taking off for a practice flight with a crew of ten officers and men aboard.

A giant R.A.F. flyingboat.

when the tip of the wing struck a passing dockyard launch.

The flyingboat heeled over with the contact and crashed into the sea.

The mishap was seen by hundreds of people ashore and immediately a swarm of speedboats from the air-station and fishing boats in the vicinity had gathered at the spot where the huge machine was sinking.

Nine members of the crew were picked up, but one of those aboard was never found and it is supposed that he was drowned.

NINE INJURED.

One of the crew was severely injured by the crash and six of the others were less badly hurt, only two escaping unscathed.

The shock of the collision of the wing with the launch was considerable and two of the passengers on board the craft were injured.

London, Jan. 13. The R.A.F. flyingboat sank almost immediately after the collision. The members of the crew who escaped, climbed out of the closed cockpit by opening its sliding roof.—Reuter.

ESTATE OF LATE MR. COOLIDGE

ESTIMATED AT HALF A MILLION

New York, Jan. 12. According to a message from Northampton, Mass., by the will of the late Ex-President Coolidge all his estate, personal and real, goes to his widow.

It is stated unofficially that the estate is estimated at $500,000.—Reuter.

The anticyclone remains centred to the north of the Yangtze Valley and has reached abnormal intensity. Strong monsoon will prevail over the China coast and the China Sea. Local forecast:—North winds, fresh; cloudy, some drizzle.

BRITISH PAPER SUSPENDED

IRAQ AND BAGHDAD COMMENT ON OIL DISPUTE WITH PERSIA

Baghdad, Jan. 13. The British-controlled Baghdad Times has been suspended from publication for a period of fifteen days by order of the Iraqi Council of Ministers (the Cabinet).

The suspension was ordered on the grounds that references made in the journal to the Anglo-Persian oil dispute were liable to affect the friendly relations between Iraq and a friendly State.

BRIEF FIGHTING

CHINESE BRINGING UP FRESH TROOPS

PASSING THROUGH TIENTSIN

Tokyo, Jan. 13.

Fresh hostilities, of brief duration, took place in the vicinity of Shanhaikwan yesterday afternoon, the Japanese launching a successful attack upon the city of Yungangpao.

According to advices from Chin-chow, the attack was carried out by a Japanese cavalry detachment, assisted by aircraft, which subjected the town to aerial bombardment. Yungangpao is a few miles to the north of Shanhaikwan, on the Manchurian-Hopei border, and its occupation presented no great difficulties, the defenders being few in number.

The operations were carried out on the pretext that Yungangpao concealed the headquarters of the Chinese Volunteer leaders operating in Jehol.—Reuter.

CHINESE FORTIFICATIONS

Chinwangtao, Jan. 11. Elaborate fortifications with many bomb-proof shelters have been erected along the bank of a small river running about three miles to the west of Shanhaikwan and forming a natural defence position. The Chinese fortifications were inspected by a Reuter's special correspondent who visited the Chinese front line to the east of Chinwangtao. The bed of the river was found to be quite dry and seemed easily passable anywhere. The Chinese troops holding the defences were found to be in excellent spirits despite the low temperature and the biting wind.

STOP PRESS

Rumours were in circulation this afternoon that the motor bus service franchises for Hongkong and Kowloon have now been definitely awarded, and that the tender of the China Motorbus Company has been accepted for Hongkong and that of the Kowloon Bus Company for Kowloon. Enquiries made from the Government failed to secure any confirmation, it being stated that nothing could be disclosed until the official announcement had been made.

BRITAIN AND JAPAN

AMBASSADOR CALLS ON UCHIDA.

Tokyo, Jan. 13.

It is authoritatively learned that Sir Francis Lindley, acting upon instructions, called upon Count Uchida yesterday and, in a friendly manner, it is understood, called attention to the threat to British interests in North China due to the tense situation following the Sino-Japanese clash at Shanhaikwan.—Reuter.

TREASURY STEPS IN

SALE OF BOOTS DRUG CO.

DAMAGING EFFECT ON EXCHANGE

(Our Own Correspondent).

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraph, 1933. Received, January 12, 1933.)

London, Jan. 12. How delicate is the balance of the sterling-dollar exchange is shown by the request of the Treasury for the suspension of an agreement reached last night whereby the financial control of Boots the Chemists and the Boots Pure Drug Company is to return to Britain from American hands.

The Chancellor's intervention arises from the fear that exchanges might be considerably adversely affected by the transfer to the United States of the equivalent of £22,000,000 involved in the transaction.

The Company passed into American hands in 1920 and they were keen to sell it back, the transaction being the latest of several similar deals since the slump on Wall Street.

If the Chancellor of the Exchequer withholds permission for the transfer, the agreement will probably fall through as the shares could not be dealt in on the Stock Exchange.

SOVIET MINISTER TO CHINA

EXPECTED SHORTLY IN NANKING

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraph, 1933. Received, January 12, 1933.)

Shanghai, Jan. 13. The Soviet Government has appointed M. Bogomoloff as Russian Minister to China and he is expected to arrive in Nanking shortly.

His arrival is expected to enable further progress to be made with the scheme for an air-mail service to Europe.

The Chinese authorities predict the early inauguration of a Europe-Asia mail and passenger service and it is stated that since the resumption of Sino-Soviet relations, steps have been taken to push the project, especially in connection with the negotiations by the German and Chinese authorities with Russia for permission for air transportation via Russian territory.—Reuter.

INDEPENDENCE OF PHILIPPINES

BILL TO BE VETOED BY MR. HOOVER.

Washington, Jan. 12. The Philippine Independence Bill will, as forecast, be vetoed by President Hoover.

An announcement regarding the veto will be made to Congress to-morrow, according to Mrs. Snell, the Republican leader of the House of Representatives.

FOUR DOWN FOR FORTY-TWO

APPALLING START AT ADELAIDE

BLACK FRIDAY

SMART FIELDING BY AUSTRALIANS

Adelaide, Jan. 13. FRIDAY THE THIRTEENTH! Well might England's supporters be superstitious after to-day's performance in the Third Test.

Jardine's men collapsed sensationally. Three wickets went down for sixteen runs and the fourth fell at 30. At lunch 37 runs were on the board.

There was nothing in the wicket to account for it. It was in perfect condition and apparently full of runs. Jardine was out to a thoroughly bad stroke. Hammond and Sutcliffe were the victims of some brilliant fielding.

Thirty thousand spectators witnessed the commencement of the game in sunny weather with a cool breeze blowing. Conditions were ideal when Jardine won the toss.

CHANGED ORDER.

The England skipper decided to change his usual batting order. Having experimented with Leyland and Wyatt as Sutcliffe's first wicket partner, and apparently being unsatisfied, he decided to put himself in first to-day. It was definitely his unlucky day. He was first out after four runs had been scored.

Wall and O'Reilly were the opening bowlers and they pegged the batsmen down only four runs coming in the first 23 minutes. The game came to a sensational collapse.

JARDINE GOES.

Jardine attempted to pull Wall to leg. It was a poor length ball, but Jardine misjudged it astonishingly and it took his leg stump. He had scored three of the four runs when sent back.

Hammond and Sutcliffe played cautious cricket, the Gloucestershire man being extremely subdued. At six-teen he attempted to cut Wall and was brilliantly taken by Oldfield on the offside. Wall was kicking up his heels and at this stage had taken two wickets for ten runs.

AN INDICATION OF PUBLIC FEELING

Sir,—I hasten, as one of this Colony's public, to urge those in authority to give further consideration to their decision not to interfere with the sentence of death on Cheng Kwok-yau. There is a reasonable doubt and no definite evidence to connect the accused with the actual murder. If he did the crime he is accused of, it was done under great provocation, and for this reason alone, where there is a life at stake, mercy should be shown.—Yours, etc.

FREE STATE ELECTION DRAMA

SHAKING DE VALERA'S CONFIDENCE

COSGRAVE OFFER TO FARMERS

Dublin, Jan. 12.

A dramatic counter-bid by Mr. Cosgrave, chief opponent of de Valera, to capture the decisive farmers' vote in the coming election was made to-day.

It may easily prove the turning-point in the campaign. Mr. de Valera promised in his election address to reduce the amount of the land annuities by one-half.

In a speech at Kildare to-day, Mr. Cosgrave said that if he was returned to power, he would remit the land annuities due in November and December 1932, in June, November and December, 1933, and June 1934, making his first collection of the annuities at the end of 1934.

MORTUARY AND REDUCTION.

He added that when the time for further collections came round, two years hence, he would only collect half of what the farmers had hitherto been paying as he believed they were unable to pay more.

The announcement is likely to sway the votes of the farmers, whose deputies, instead of the Land Annuitants, will probably hold the balance of power in the future Government. If this forecast proves accurate, Mr. Cosgrave will probably form the next government, with the assistance of the

KEEPING 'EM AMUSED

SOCIAL SCHEMES FOR JOBLESS

PRINCE OF WALES' APPEAL

London, Jan. 12.

Schemes for helping the unemployed to spend their enforced leisure in congenial and helpful ways of voluntary service, which the Prince of Wales is doing so much to foster, have been launched in nearly 200 towns.

In the larger towns, several schemes are operating—in Liverpool and the Merseyside, for instance, there are thirty social centres for unemployed men—and the activities take many forms.

HINTS FOR KNITTERS.

When winding wool always do so very loosely (wind round your fingers all the time for instance), so that the surface of the yarn is not injured in any way. Many of the wools sold already wound have a tab attached to a thread saying "Use from this end."

Nearly everybody knits differently—some very loosely, others tightly. When exact measurements are important, therefore, it is worth while working out your own tension first of all. Cast on 20 stitches and work about an inch or so in the pattern you are going to use. Then count how many stitches you knit to the inch and regulate your pattern accordingly.

Never knot your wool when joining two ends together. Simply cross the two wools a few inches from each end and knit with the double strands for three or four stitches. The ends can always be drawn through to the wrong side when finishing off.

NEW PARIS CRAZE.

Eye-Lashes to Match Dress.

The question of detachable eye-lashes is greatly agitating smart Frenchwomen.

In a Paris department store daily demonstrations are being given by pretty assistants. To-day they have had to be removed to a less frequented part of the building because of the crowd of men attracted.

Two systems are shown—one in which the lashes are removed nightly before retiring or may be changed in colour to suit the toilette, and another which is semi-permanent.

The lashes remain in position for three weeks, but during that time the wearer may not wash her eyes. They cost from 30 francs (about 8s.) a pair.

In a Paris motor-bus recently was observed a dainty blonde who wore a light green frock with eyelashes to match.

Kid and suede combine in this effective half and half treatment. Black and brown are the popular winter shoes.

Fifteen-hundred-coiffures-in-one is this "Miss America" style of hairdressing. It is a composite, made by Joseph Capitaine, photographer, of the one and a half thousand coiffures arranged by leading hairdressers for the American Beauty and Style Show. It is a coiffure suited to red heads, blondes, brunettes and white-haired women. And a coiffure easy on almost any type of features. Note the soft wave over the forehead, the bun swirl over the ears, and the little curled ringlets at the nape of the neck.

PRACTICAL RECIPES.

Baked Apples.

½ lb. of fine bread-crumbs, 2 oz. each butter and sugar, 1 lemon, 6 large cooking apples.

Butter a deep pie-dish; add a layer of bread-crumbs; then a layer of peeled, cored, and sliced apples, mixed with the sugar; add a little grated lemon rind and juice, and repeat the crumbs, apples, &c., finishing with bread-crumbs.

Put some small dots of butter on the top, and bake for half an hour. Turn out, and serve with any rather sweet sauce.

Seven Cup Pudding

1 cupful of flour; 1 cupful of very fine bread-crumbs, 1 cupful each sugar, minced suet, jam, milk, and raisins; 1 teaspoonful of salt, ½ teaspoonful of carbonate of soda. Mix all these in their order; pour into a buttered mould, and steam for 3 hours.

To Clean the Thermos Flask. Put a little vinegar in the bottom of the flask, and add some crushed eggshells.

Shake the flask briskly, leave it for a few minutes, shake it again, pour in enough water to half-fill the flask, and again shake it; empty, and rinse out. Leave it inverted, until every drop of moisture has dried, and when putting the flask away, do not replace the cork.

Ink Stains on Silver

To remove the stains, pour a very small quantity of fresh ink on to them, and with a soft cloth rub the ink off briskly. The old stain will come away.

FASHIONABLE SLEEVES

Sleeves for the new coats have an important role. They do a lot to give a feminine air to a smart wrap.

Capelets and caps at the top of sleeves continue to be favoured in

FASHION NOTES.

Frocks to be Shorter.

Shorter frocks are making their appearance this season, especially for daytime. For evening, women still cling to the ankle-length or floor-length skirt. Trains are only worn by dowagers.

Coats will also be shorter, and will show four inches of the dress hem. The new frocks are mostly made of silk-crepe, but the most successful are a mixture of pure and artificial silk, which produces a pleasing matt surface and the required heaviness for tailoring.

By the way, all the best dresses are tailored. Note this, please. Frills and flounces are to be discarded.

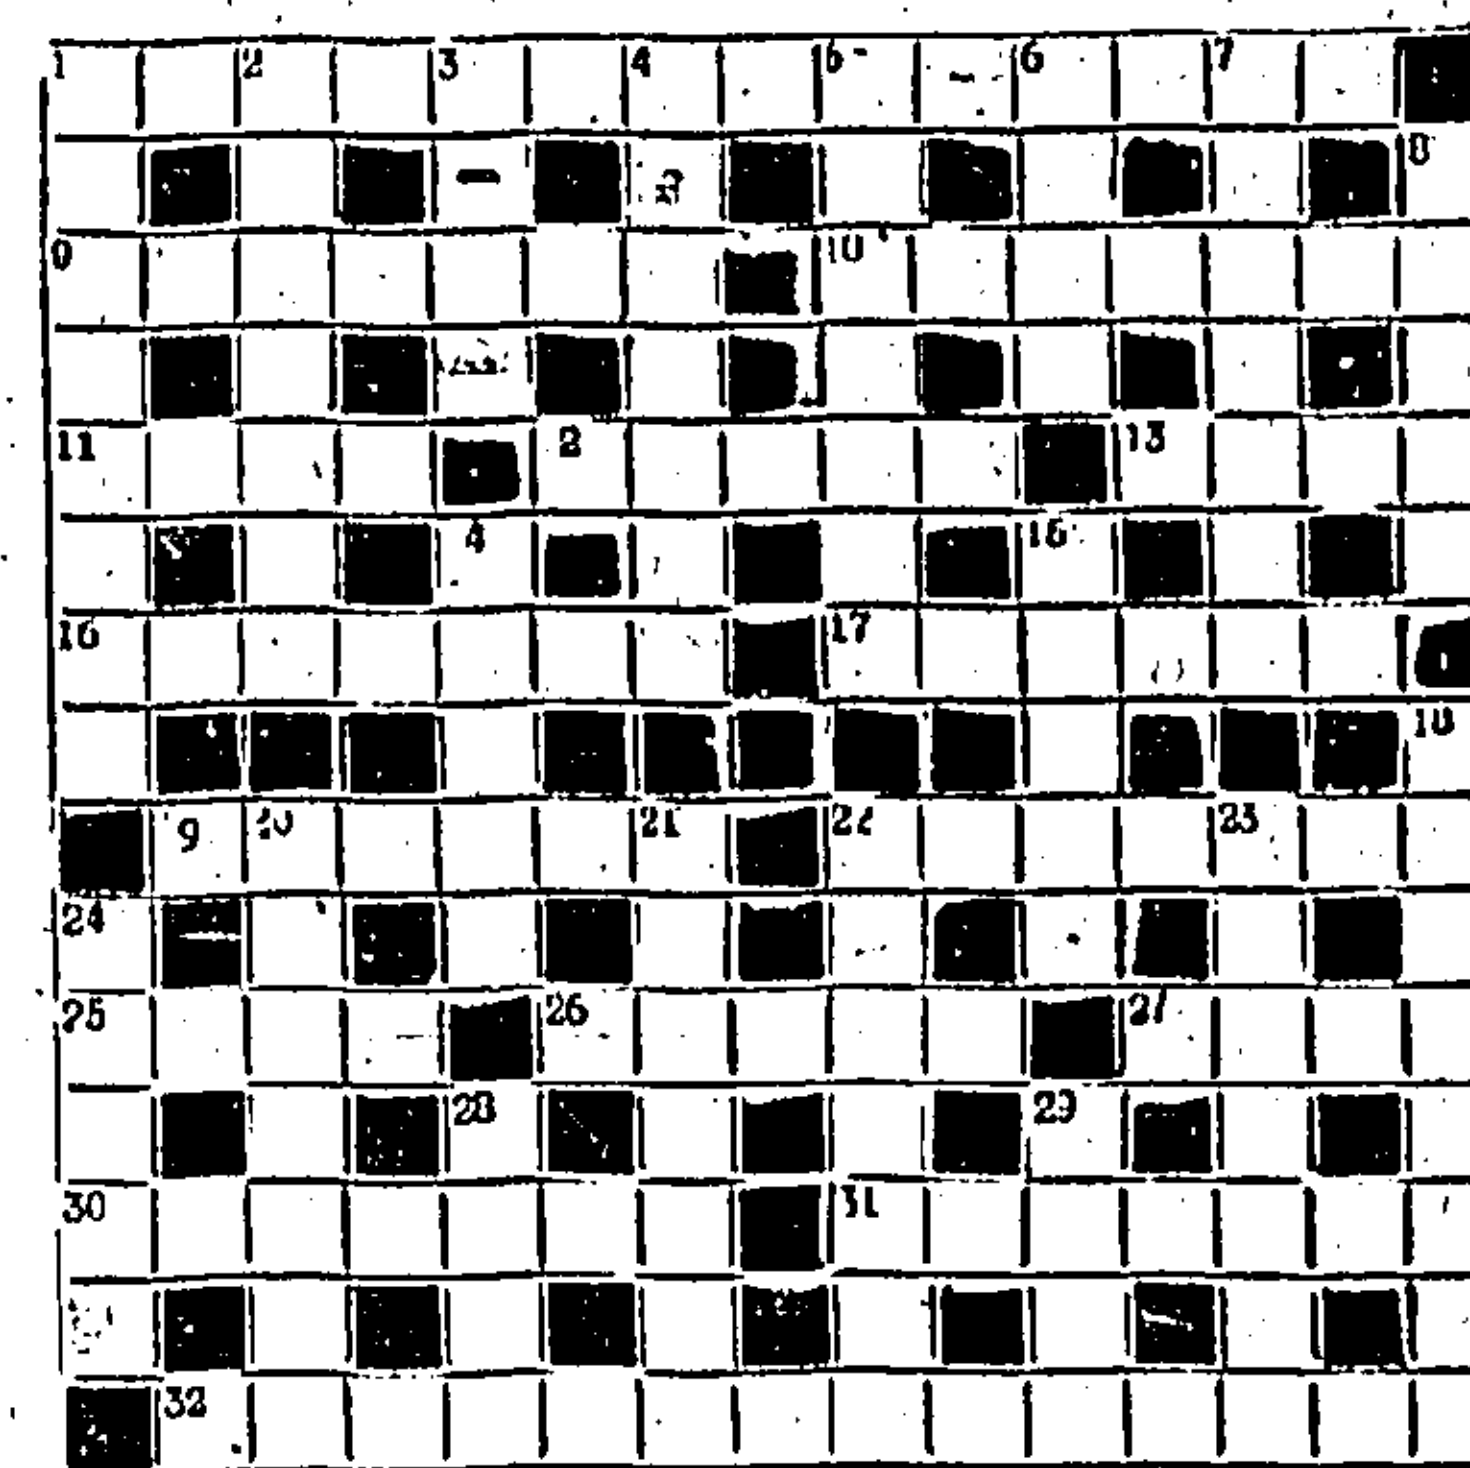

A lower waistline, diagonally cut skirts with no pleats or godets, short cape sleeves in one with the bodice, and a slightly bloused waist, are salient features of the dress of to-morrow.

The newest frock of all has a fitted bodice which develops without seams to a cape on the shoulders, making short, full sleeves. The waist is belted by a thick strip of narrow leather. The skirt moulds the hips, and the required fullness is provided by the clever diagonal cut.

While the new sleeves are frivolous and full, the new necklines are exceedingly modest and almost puritanical to the average spectator. We shall appear to have gone suddenly either demurely modest or effectually ecclesiastical, with tab and bib-like collars, long, white, vest-like plastrons and deep cuffs, always in white, either of silk or pique. Some of these high collars lie at the back and the ends hang down to the back of your waistline.

Paris. Shirred sleeves are new, and those with very much reduced balloon puffs are also worn. Sleeves with fur trimming placed on the upper part are many.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Do Vos's manner was cool, almost indifferent. He seemed to be making conversation. Nevertheless a little trickle of fear went up Linda's spine at the suggestion underlying the random phrases. Tom's words came back to her. "Not off the grounds," he had said. "In the boat."

"I often take the wheel," she answered quite calmly, "but I'm no mechanic and scared to death of engines. Tom manages that." "And I suppose, like most men, he would be enraged if another were to attempt the task in his absence." Still the offhand, casual tone but for the moment Linda was utterly incapable of an answer. Instinctively she looked toward the house and his eyes followed hers. She saw him glance up toward the balcony and then knew by his expression that his thoughts had shifted to another subject. She could safely introduce the theme so much in her own mind. He spoke first, however, soberly but without constraint.

"I see you have already mended the balcony railing. A shocking accident, Madam!—I beg you to believe I am indeed sorry that it occurred."

"Thank you." The ring of sincerity in his voice touched her. After all, it was foolish to think, just because he was interested in boats—as was everyone else on the bay—that he meant to take her, alone, out on the water. "It was shocking. Terrible! I can hardly believe now that it really happened. We live so uneventfully here and the place looks, even now, so peaceful. No," she went back to answer his question, "the break is not really mended. Someone seems to have put the upper railing back into place. That is all."

"Ah, yes. I see now. Several of the lower bars are still out of alignment. Have you—" (he hesitated as though wondering whether the subject might be too painful) "any idea how it happened? You—"

"I was there, you mean?" Aside from her desire to lead the talk back to the tragedy, Linda felt a surge of pure relief to speak about it openly. Seeing this, he relaxed his evident caution lest he distress or displease her. "No. I don't know what happened, Mr. DeVos. It's been told me, just as if I'd been miles away."

"Ah! We found you—unconscious—"

The evident sympathy warmed her. She could speak freely to this now entirely attentive, courteous, understanding person. She thought fleetingly how much more natural Europeans were in any approach to trouble or unhappiness, which all too often tongue-tied the average self-conscious American.

"Yes—in my cousin's room. But I was downstairs when it happened. You know," she hesitated, remembering the events on the club porch, then plunged ahead, "he was to have left the house early this morning. When we got home after the dance it was so horribly hot and so nearly morning that Tom and I thought we'd cool off with a dip instead of trying to go to bed. Tom went on down ahead of me. I came out on the terrace and—"

Her voice faltered. "Just as I did so, Cousin Amos must have fallen overhead. He—his body hit the terrace right in front of me."

"You say 'his body.' He was dead—?"

"Not then. At least, his eyelids moved. That's why I left him. I rushed indoors for help—"

"You are very courageous, you

American women. No screaming, no fainting!"

"Well, not then," Linda remembered what was supposed to have happened. She must tell her story as she and Tom had agreed—sticking as closely to the truth as possible, but leaving out what must on no account be revealed to anyone, even this attentive, sympathetic listener. "I should have called out, perhaps. But I simply felt I must do something! I hurried upstairs blindly—his door was open and that must have startled me, though it's hazy now when I try to remember. Going to that room was partly force of habit. When Tom's aunt lived here we always had it when we visited and after we moved in we were there for a long time while the rest of the house was being decorated. Anyhow—when I saw the broken railing—"

She flung out her hands with an expressive gesture.

"That is such a natural psychology," the man nodded slowly. "So often it is the symbol of a thing rather than the actual occurrence which shocks us. You kept your head wonderfully in the face of the accident itself, but the suggestion of the torn railings—"

"Yes. I hadn't thought of it that way. But even now I feel all cold and tremble when I remember how I stood there and looked at that broken place. Everything got black and sort of rushed at me—I felt as if I were choking for breath—"

"It is not a pleasant feeling—to faint!"

"It's horrible! I've only fainted once before in my life and that was so long ago I'd forgotten how it felt. That awful sensation of strangling—"

Involuntarily her hands went to her throat.

"Ah?" She noticed a return to the polite boredom of his previous manner and recollected suddenly that no man enjoyed a detailed description of ailments and symptoms.

"Then you came to my rescue—all of you," she added to explain the personal pronoun as his eyebrows lifted. He laughed easily.

"My dear Mrs. Averill, there was no need for rescue. Your very good friend, Mr. Pratt, had already lifted you as Mr. Statlander and I came in. We could only offer assistance. Then when your husband came, he naturally took command."

"Poor Tom! He must have been terribly upset!"

A reminiscent smile twisted the corners of the Belgian's grave mouth.

"Yes—ah—Mr. Averill was considerably upset. He ran upstairs dripping from the water, so he was obliged to waive the very delightful duty of carrying you to your room in favour of Mr. Pratt. I believe he yielded his privilege with some reluctance."

"Oh!" Nobody had told Linda this. It somewhat explained the stiffness between the two men. Poor Tom! It must have been annoying to have to permit—in fact, request—Marvin to carry her to her room and doubtless he had not been any too gracious about it. She was glad she had made this minor discovery. It seemed to be about all she had gleaned from the present conversation.

"I hope you had a little sleep between coming back from the Club and the accident this morning," he said. "I'm sorry your rest was so disturbed."

"Like you, I preferred not to retire," he answered. "The night was hot but there was a slight breeze off the water and I made myself comfortable in the chair by the window and dozed off there. I must in fact have gone soundly asleep, for I did not hear your cousin's fall. Your own, inside the house, sounded faintly through my confused dreams—and then I heard steps and voices which thoroughly roused me. Mr. Pratt, in fact, left his room with such—such vigor and haste that it would have roused any sleeper."

"Marvin does move energetically when he's in a hurry," Linda smiled at the picture his words suggested. "But he's always dependable when anything goes wrong."

The Belgian's lifted eyebrows disclaimed any advantage in the trait.

"A person of great intensity," he commented. "For myself, I find such virile heartiness fatiguing."

Perhaps Linda answered sensibly. Perhaps her reply was what it seemed to her own ears, a feeble and meaningless creak.

For, facing toward the house, she had suddenly felt her eyes drawn upward. In that second, at the closed window of the nursery, she saw a face. Though it instantly moved back to dissolve in the shadows of the room behind there was no mistaking the iron grey of the hair, the strong features, especially the prominent jaw. Marvin Pratt in the nursery—looking down at them on the lawn—and most important, pulling back quickly out of sight the moment she looked toward him.

"Why should he be there? Was he spying on her? Or—the balcony communicating with the other room—"

She seemed to be whirling through space. The world was a dizzy unreality and she longed only for sanctuary and safety. Then she steeled, realizing that DeVos had noticed neither the apparition nor her distress. Desperately she tried to think of some obvious remark to cloak her panic. Accident saved her. Through the casement door came Statlander, followed by Tom. At the same moment Rosie emerged from behind the bushes and came toward her. The earth became stable again—it was time for tea.

SOUTH SEAS ROMANCE FAMOUS STAGE SUCCESS COMES TO CENTRAL AS SPECTACULAR TALKING FILM

DOLORES DEL RIO AND JOEL MCRAE
IN "BIRD OF PARADISE"

WHILE there are beautiful foreign artists like Dolores del Rio in Hollywood there will always be films like The Bird of Paradise, a Radio version of the stage success due at the Central on Sunday. It matters not if the girl be a typical Latin type; a string of beads and a minimum of clothing to drape round her supple form is sufficient to transform her into a Polynesian—and there is the necessary sex appeal for the story.

The Bird of Paradise was not the first story of the beautiful young savage South Sea Island girl who fell in love with the rich American; nor will it be the last; but of all of them, it seems the least ephemeral. It must be nearly 20 years since the story hit the New York stage and broke long-distance records: it had additional publicity in the prolonged litigation over the copyright and was revived again and again. Now it has come again, in sound-film, a little different from the original plot, but with magnificent photographic shots of South Sea Island scenery to add to its appeal.

The re-action of the time-worn plot on 1933 audiences should be interesting. It is romance of the highest degree, and in these days of blasé cinema audiences, it is doubtful if it is romance that convinces or appeals. Joel McGrae, who appears to be the present requirement in masculine sex appeal, plays the wealthy American on the yachting cruise. He becomes infatuated with Dolores a fascinating little lady, snatches her from the very arms of her tribal lover, and then goes native for a month or so. The climax is reached when the tribe drag the pair off to appease the wrath of the active volcano. Naturally they are saved on the very brink of the crater, but the girl returns to make the sacrifice.

A comparatively small portion of the film is occupied by the telling of the tale. For the most part it is an exhibition of photography, rivaling those excellent shots that featured Tahu. Submarine cameras have turned out several feet of the film, and an artistic hand has been responsible for the shots through dense foliage and tropical palms.

A big cast does little but add the background: Joel McGrae and Dolores del Rio are in practically every scene and do their best to make the story seem convincing, but it is a big task. It is not claimed that the film was taken in the South Seas, and although the scenes are realistic, an incongruous note is the incidental music of orchestral instruments. One also wonders where the army of technical advisers were: Kanaka maidens don't generally have daintily manicured finger nails, even if they are princesses, and the coconut palm down which Joel McGrae slides as if it were a greasy pole, must have been a unique arboreal specimen.

CLAUDETTE Colbert provides the feminine interest in "The Phantom President," due at the King's on Sunday. George M. Cohan, famous American humorist, makes his first talking film appearance in the leading dual role.

"DON QUIXOTE" AS TALKIE

CHALIAPIN IN LEAD

GEORGE ROBEY AS
SANCHE PANZA

HOLLYWOOD is not alone in making films from literary classics. Now Europe is trying its hand, and on nothing less than Cervantes' Don Quixote. The film is yet uncompleted, but a busy time is forecast for the press agents and writers of puff-paragraphs, for the greatest men from the four corners of the earth appear to have been gathered together for the production.

The Knight of the Doleful Countenance is played by Feodor Chaliapin, Russian opera singer whose basso has boomed out on thousands of gramophone records and who has inflicted his dynamic personality in practically every country of the world. Don Quixote is his favourite opera, and if the film follows the story, he should know the part at least.

And who is Sancho Panza, the gallant knight's faithful follower? Why, none other than England's favourite, George Robey. Strange as it may seem, George Robey has shed the bowler hat and female attire that has made him so popular in London, and straddles an ass.

At the head of affairs as director of production is G. W. Pabst, German artist of artists, whose name is generally spoken in whispers as the world's greatest master of cinema. He was responsible for Four Infantrymen, the German film screened here last year.

Robey has just returned from the south of France, where the film was made because of the suitability of the climate for filming. He returned with a full tide of invective against the climate and a full tide of enthusiasm for the work he was engaged on.

The film is being made in French and English. Chaliapin playing in both.

"I had to grow a beard and whiskers," said Robey in an interview on his return. "I started them a week before I left London. When they were half-grown—when I was merely seven days unshaven—I looked awful. When I arrived at the Nice hotel, and the reception-clerk asked me where I came from, for purposes of registration, I said 'Devil's Island.' Later, when they were nicely grown, and I was walking about the town in flannel trousers," a yachtsman, the population called me 'Edouard Sept.'

"Pabst is wonderful as a director. With him, the artist is nothing! It is all 'the film.' Chaliapin, I, any one else—were nothing. He is his camera-man and the picture as whole are the chief consideration. I am a photographer myself, and a jolly good one; but I can tell you that the work of that camera-man

FILM INSTITUTE

English Organisation to be Formed

(who works hand in glove with Pabst) was marvellous. Someone who has seen the 'rushes' (the uncut version) in Paris, tells me that the photography is the finest that any film has ever had.

At last, after much parley and speculation, the long-talked-of National Film Institute is about to become a fact writes G.A. Lejaune in the London Observer. Within the next month a provisional scheme of its activities is likely to be published, and a skeleton organisation will have been formed to make appointments and direct the policy of the institution. It is expected that the scheme will have direct Government sanction, as well as the co-operation of the three official representative bodies of the film trade, the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, the Kinematograph Renters' Society, and the Film Producers' Section of the Federation of British Industries. Mass meetings throughout the country have already secured the goodwill of various public bodies, and educationists generally have welcomed the idea of such a practical link between the cinema and the school.

Those who have opposed the Film Institute, or ignored it, or shelved its consideration in the past, may just as well accept the fact of its existence now. There will be a Film Institute, and just how valuable that Institute will be to the nation generally, and the film trade in particular, depends on the course which is adopted by all parties in the initial stages of the scheme.

The Institute is to be inaugurated under the control of a provisional constitution, with a Board of Governors of a nominated rather than a formally representative nature, drawn partly from the trade, partly from the educational bodies, and partly, it is hoped, from the Government. This Board of Governors will be small, probably nine in number, but will have the power to co-opt, and to create representative machinery on a larger scale. It will also determine the scope of the Institute during the first year's work, and go a long way towards directing its ultimate policy.

It will be seen, therefore, that the choice of the right men for this provisional board is a matter of first-rate importance. They must be representative, not only of the best, but of the widest interest, both of the trade and the nation, and they must carry the fullest confidence of their parties. The gravity of this initial representation, particularly in the case of the cinematograph trade, can hardly be over-estimated. For these men are going to carry the practical burden of a scheme which may look excellent on paper, but which in the working out will need endless adjustment, extension and organisation if it is to perform any useful function to the nation at large.

There is still an idea in certain sections of the film trade that the Institute is a purely academic affair which need not concern them. There is also an idea in the more conservative circles of education that the Institute is a small and inconspicuous factor in an essentially educational scheme. Both these ideas are profoundly wrong. The practical co-operation of the film trade, in its three aspects of producer, renter, and exhibitor, is the one essential fact of the whole scheme. In the end, every suggestion put forward by the Institute will come down to a matter of raw stock, of sound equipment, of apparatus, and of studio floor-space. The men who control these will in fact determine the success of the Institute, however the authority may be allocated on paper.

The whole affair in the end resolves itself into this very simple sequence of facts. There will very shortly be a Film Institute, which will have some kind of trade representation. Unless that representation is sound, and backed by the full confidence of its members, the Institute will be a paper organisation only, with limited academic functions and a very problematic term of existence. But if the trade as a whole will co-operate, and appoint fully authorised representatives to the board, the Institute may very well become the nucleus of a large national organisation, operating ultimately under Royal Charter, and involving multiple interests of commerce, education, industry, and public life.

WHY CHENG SHOULD NOT DIE

But for a deficiency in the Colony's Code of Criminal Procedure, it is possible that Cheng Kwok-yau, a petition for whose reprieve has been refused by the Governor-in-Council, would not have to pay the full penalty of the law. We refer to the non-existence of a Court of Criminal Appeal. The creation of such a Court locally has been mooted for some considerable time, but it still remains to be brought into being. Unfortunately, the intention to create it is of no value to a convicted man. If such a Court existed, it would have been possible for Cheng's counsel to have brought before it a large number of facts and submissions which could not be presented to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council at Home, even had leave to appeal been granted. The whole case would, in fact, have been thoroughly reviewed, whereas all that has been possible has been to seek to induce the Privy Council to hear an appeal, in which connexion it is to be borne in mind that this body has a marked reluctance to being regarded as a Court of Criminal Appeal. We stress this point because, with such a Court in being locally, Cheng would automatically have had a right to appeal. In its absence, he is shut out from a privilege which is enjoyed in England and which before long may also obtain here. But there are other reasons why considerations of clemency might have been allowed to prevail. First and foremost in the gap in the evidence definitely linking Cheng with the crime; secondly, the admittedly tainted character of much of that evidence; and, thirdly, the surprising brevity of the Judge's summing-up and the directions to the jury. These points, there can be little doubt, would have weighed heavily with any Court of Appeal. The only semblance of an appeal which Cheng enjoyed was the discussion of reserved points of law before the Full Court, on which, in accordance with local procedure, the Trial Judge had a seat. Issues of fact could not come before that Court. There is a further point worthy of mention, namely, that juries in Hongkong consist of only seven members, as compared with twelve at Home. This is obviously to the detriment of a man on trial for his life. A necessary reform, at least in murder cases, would appear to be an enlargement of the jury. If it be pleaded that larger juries would inflict a hardship on the business community, this can be countered by the suggestion of extending jury service to women, large numbers of whom found ample time to sit through the greater part of the Cheng trial. The conclusion to be drawn from the Cheng case is that our Code of Criminal Procedure badly stands in need of overhaul. Putting the general issue on one side, however, we cannot but feel that it will be wrong for Cheng to pay the full penalty. There is a tendency in some quarters to press for the due execution of the law because of the condemned man's reputed wealth. Whilst no-one wishes to see it made possible for riches to buy immunity from punishment, by the same token they should not have the effect of jeopardising a man's life. In view of the special and peculiar features of the case, we feel, even at this the eleventh hour, that the ends of justice would be met by a commutation of the death sentence.

Forty-Hour Week

The British Government's effort to stifle discussion at the International Labour Conference on a proposal for a universal forty-four week hardly fits in with Mr. Ramsay MacDonald's claim that the Cabinet are endeavouring to take the long view in dealing with the unemployment problem. The British delegate could be forgiven for arguing that the proposal is impracticable—though it seems to us a question of will and determination above all else—but when he declared that, presuming an agreement was reached, a convention drawn up and ratified, it would have little material influence on unemployment, he talked so much nonsense. The subject does not require to be discussed at any length. A Government spokesman, broadcasting in England quite recently, pointed out that even if, by some magic, the depression was suddenly lifted and all business enterprises resumed full capacity production, there would still be nearly two millions unemployed in Britain. The President of the American Federation of Labour has reached a similar conclusion. A return of prosperity to American industry would still leave, in present conditions, three or four million men without employment. This situation has been brought about by the development of labour-saving devices which are still being produced. Unless we devise a system whereby consumption can be made to keep pace with productive capacity, there will always be scrambling for international markets and the cycle of boom and depression will swing higher and lower. While this has probably struck few people, the so-called dole has proved an economic blessing in disguise in Great Britain. It has sustained the purchasing power of the workers and thereby maintained consumption at a much higher level than it could have achieved had the people been left to starve. The ball would have been set rolling like a snowball, unemployment gathering speed, until probably 75 per cent. of the people would have been idle. But the present problem is to get those people now out of work back into employment and if there is no prospect for them in a resumption of full industrial output, there must be a departure from the reactionary attitude revealed at Geneva on Wednesday. A forty-hour week merely means that six people would do the work of five under the forty-eight-hour week system. Twelve millions would be in employment as against ten millions. It might not work out quite so easily as this; it might be necessary to work down to a 32-hour week to achieve the desired effect. The wages question does not offer insuperable difficulties. Too big a proportion of industrial remuneration goes into the pockets of people who can afford, in normal times, to re-invest instead of spending. To improve consumption levels, State pensions at a certain age would remove one of the incentives to savings, fear of destitution in old age. Much of this may seem idealistic—or Socialistic—but surely the depression has been deep enough to shake industrialists out of their old ideas of the relations between Capital and Labour.

OTTAWA AND OUR FAIR

By SIR GILBERT C. VYLE

(Sir Gilbert Vyle was one of Great Britain's industrial advisers at the Imperial Economic Conference.)

We were on the threshold of Ottawa when last year's British Industries Fair opened. The moment was one of drama, because, although many of us had already a shrewd notion of Ottawa's effect upon the nations who are our customers, there were others who doubted.

Would the foreign buyers shun the Fair?

They overwhelmed it. The throng of them arriving from overseas was more than twice the size of that which came in 1931.

To-day we have crossed the threshold. The Ottawa agreements are the world's property; and he would be a doubter indeed who could persuade himself that next month's British Industries Fair will not be the better for them.

The B. I. F. Shows How to Balance Trade.

The Continent is queuing up. Already sixteen European countries are giving their buyers special concessions to come to Britain for the occasion. And why? Schwab, the steel magnate, has estimated that the agreements mean to countries outside the Empire a trade loss of between thirty and forty million pounds a year.

The Continent grows a trifle scared. They are realising Britain's enormous buying power and fear they are going to lose some of the trade which they have had in the past. But they know that they will not lose it all. We expressly declared at Ottawa that we were prepared to consider preferential and reciprocal trade with any country outside the Empire on terms perhaps not quite as good as those given within the Empire yet considerably better than they would be if no trade agreement were reached.

Imagine the national urge in each of the Continental producers everywhere getting together and impressing on their Governments the need to encourage purchases from Britain before this great market of theirs vanishes under their eyes.

The time has gone when they could without any control send us products of any kind and price without the slightest intention of taking payment for them in British goods and services on equally favourable terms.

In the past we have never had the machinery to control such a situation. Ottawa has given us that machinery and the British Industries Fair is performing an incalculable service in showing nationals of trading countries who in the past have missed their opportunity how to use it in the future by coming here and helping to achieve a more just balance of trade between us and them.

It was Ottawa that showed the way.

What the Dominions Feared. The Dominions themselves are already old friends of the Fair both as exhibitors and buyers. In February they will all be there again either under the auspices of the Empire Marketing Board or in the fine displays set up for themselves by Canada and India.

As buyers, I am convinced, in the Ottawa agreements, that the Fair will be a memorable demonstration of how the Dominions may profit by the really colossal range of Britain's production power.

I may explain that, while negotiating the new tariffs, one of the recurring difficulties which we had with the Dominions was their fear that the products we wished to sell to them were exactly those they themselves manufactured. If that were so, naturally they could not have bought from us without putting out of work certain of their own people now engaged in making such products.

I need not say that in fact we were under no illusions on the question. We realised clearly that, where a Dominion could produce a stock line as cheaply as we could, it would be the proper thing for it to carry out its own production.

On the other hand, if variety of production were the aim, a special line for the Dominion to manufacture might very well be a bread and butter line for a firm at home, producing in large quantities. Here we felt that it was better for everybody that Britain should manufacture efficiently in large quantities than that a Dominion should manufacture inefficiently in small quantities. In this way the people of the Dominion themselves would be able to buy a special line more cheaply from Britain and increase their purchasing power to that extent, so enabling them to buy either more goods manufactured in their own Dominion or more from Great Britain, thus allowing Great Britain in turn to buy more from the Dominions.

Salesmen Are the Statesmen's Allies.

A textile mill in Canada might be able to produce cloth for suitings as good in every way, including price, as those to be bought from Great Britain. But men are like women in that all of them do not want to be dressed in the same pattern of a fabric, like a row of policemen. They prefer a change. But the Canadian mill which could efficiently turn out substantial quantities of a stock fabric would become inefficient when meeting small demands for special patterns; and the Canadian people would be paying prices out of all proportion to those asked for a supply from Britain.

Clearly, it would be foolish to attempt to compete with the vast range of patterns which we would be able to send out to them from Britain. We on our part admit that they can make the stock lines as efficiently as we can; they on their side grant that the making of special lines is our heritage and our business.

The Fair is Britain's shop window for the display of all such out-of-the-way things; and I would ask those who come from the Dominions, or who send their agents to the Fair, to look out for Britain's special lines.

And meanwhile let the British manufacturer be on the alert in anticipation of the visitors who will be arriving at Olympia, the White City and Castle Bromwich. Products outside the stock range carry so much higher a rate of profit that an intensive study of the subject will pay him well, and, if he will con the Ottawa schedules, he will discover just which lines have now an improved chance overseas.

Let him give prominence to them at the Fair and let him encourage the people on his stand to study the schedules too and thus be able to clinch sales with definite knowledge of landed costs under the new arrangements.

If the salesmen of Britain back up the statesmen of Britain, the alliance cannot fail to pull us through.

The Very Idea!

INTELLIGENTZIA

By Edward Kelly, Mountaineer.

Believe it or not, we are now quite definitely residing on the Peak.

After that wise-crack about Intelligent People we thought that our time was simply wasted at Kowloon. So we shifted.

Between shivers we are going to set out, for the information of the Kowloon proletariat, our impressions of the upper strata.

Our heart is in the Highlands, but our toes must be somewhere else. Every now and then we take our boots off and count our toes to make sure they are not frozen off and lying about loose.

Our first night here was so cold we couldn't yodel. We were in bed with the whole works on top of us. At 2 a.m. we got up and pulled the carpet over ourselves.

About 2.30 a.m. we pulled the wardrobe over us, and from then on we were fairly comfortable.

We were told this morning that the air up here is very rare. That's why the V. B. P. always have their noses in the air.

Our first day here we met three bankers, one ship-owner, eleven Government taipans and the Peak Hotel.

No sort of forget who else we met after the Peak Hotel. We met everybody. That is, everybody who counts. Including all the Intelligent Parents.

We felt sorry for all those poor people living in Kowloon. Nothing to look forward to but dances, tennis, golf, football, cricket, hockey and poker games. No social standing at all.

Speaking of Kowloon..... Sorry, we forgot it was not spoken about up here.

SOCIAL TRAGEDY.

Before, he was one of the most popular members of our Set.

Girls fought for the privilege of dancing with him. Now even his Best Friend avoids him.

What has made them all drop him from their parties and their pastimes?

He idly turns over the pages of a magazine as he wonders. His eyes fall on an advertisement.

Surely not. Cool Lord! It cannot be! "The insidious thing about B.O.", he reads, "is that you yourself are not aware of it. Even your best friend won't tell you."

So that was it. As the awful realisation penetrated his mind, he groaned aloud. B.O. of all things.

He must button-hole Kelly, and ask him. Kelly, his Best Friend, would tell him if asked point-blank.

"Teddy", he asked us that night, "why is everyone avoiding me. Is it—"

"No, Pete", we replied, "it's not that. But for heavens sake, old man, go easy on the Lifebuoy!"

TOO DRASTIC!

And would you believe it, we've just had a letter from the D-p-t-y C-l-r-n—Tr—s-r-r, informing us that our economy programme is a washout.

It's sheer jealousy, of course. But bang goes our O.B.E.

THE PORPOISE.

A porpoise was seen in the Harbour yesterday. The first man to see it has been on dry ginger ever since. The second thought it was a shark and rang up the Stock Exchange to see if any were missing. A third rang up the Water Police, the Harbour Master and, The Editor of The Critic. It was generally agreed that Percy the Porp. was acting out of all order, ultra vires, ipso facto, and against Sections 1 to 48 of the Aliens Restriction Ordinance.

THE DAUGHTER OF PARLIAMENTS.

How happy Ireland is now she can revive the great traditions of her ancient Parliament. A casual reader of the Irish Hansard sends us a few gems of Celtic eloquence picked out of that rich mine at haphazard. As for example:

Mr. Corry: Throw the Deputy a turnip.

Mr. Anthony: You are the low Liverpool coward you always were.

Mr. Gorey: Deputy Corry was merely using his natural language, the language of the baboon.

Mr. Corry: When the monogermic ceases interrupting me I will carry on.

Mr. Dillon: It is a damned lie. Mr. Coburn: If he was a young man I would kill him where he stands for what he has said.

The Deputy Speaker: ... But when a Deputy rises and charges another Deputy that he is after saying what is a damned lie, the dignity of this House is in question. (Somebody faints.)

"Seen a package about so big? I'm expecting something from my sister in Devonshire."

KOWLOON TRAFFIC SIGNALS

MAGISTRATE SAYS INADEQUATE

The unsatisfactory state and inadequacy of the traffic signals in Nathan Road between Pitt Street and Bowring Street were remarked on by Mr. Butters at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning when Mr. A. V. Hall, the local architect, was summoned for driving his car at more than 20 miles an hour in the controlled area at Nathan Road at 1 a.m. on December 25.

Mr. Hall, in admitting the offence, said the case would not have come to Court if he had not met with an accident. Two Chinese ran across the road and in order to avoid them he hit a tree. The summons against him was taken out in consequence of his report to the police.

Sergeant Clarke agreed that the police would not have known of the offence had not defendant reported to the police that he was driving at about 30 miles an hour.

His Worship:—Did you know that that area was controlled?

Defendant:—Yes, but I did not know how fast I was allowed to travel.

His Worship:—Yes, I have had cause to remark on the unsatisfactory state and inadequacy of the traffic signals before. I think the maximum speed one is allowed to proceed in the controlled area should be attached to the signals. In view of the defendant's clean record since 1928, his Worship registered a caution.

AIRCRAFTSMAN SENTENCED

FOR THEFT OF CLOTHING

Aircraftsman Bert Sheppard, 22 years of age, was brought before Mr. Butters at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning on two charges of theft of clothing and other articles between December 29 last and January 10, and unlawfully receiving them to have been stolen.

Defendant pleaded guilty to the charge of theft, but refused to make a statement.

It was stated by the police that the stolen articles belonged to L. A. C. Cross, who together with defendant, lived at the R.A.F. Barracks at Ma Tau Kok. Complaint was made to the police on December 29 and when he returned to barracks he found these articles stolen. He made a report to the police, whose inquiries led them to a flat at No. 13 Pilgrim Street, where the property was recovered.

The flat was occupied by a woman named Wong Siu-kwan, alias Lily Wong, who was also charged with unlawfully receiving. Sentence of two months was passed on Sheppard, but the woman was discharged.

LONDON'S "JUICE" FACTORY

SUPER-POWER UNIT AT BATTERSEA

London, Jan. 12. An order has been placed for a turbo-generating unit of 140,000 horse-power for the new super-power-station at Battersea, which will be opened next summer. This unit is the largest ordered in Great Britain and will be one of the largest in the world.

The extensions of 200,000 horse-power to the Barking super-power-station have been completed, rendering it the greatest power station in the British Empire, with a total capacity of 830,000 horse-power.

These two stations, Battersea and Barking, on completion of the present contract, will have installed 860,000 horse-power, bringing the total of all public generating stations serving London up to 2,600,000 horse-power. — British Wireless.

SUBSIDISED SHIPPING

BRITISH SUPER-TAX ADVOCATED

London, Jan. 12. Mr. W. L. Hitchens, Chairman of Cammell Lairds, the well-known British firm of shipbuilders, when launching a new Mersey ferry to-day, called attention to the serious competition British shipping was experiencing from the subsidised shipping of other nations. He said at the present time shipping belonging to other important countries was receiving £30,000,000 yearly in subsidies. He expressed the view that if a super-tax was placed on every subsidised ship entering an Imperial port, these payments would soon cease. — British Wireless.

the recent fighting at Shanhaiwan to the patriotic spirit of the defenders who fought to the end and ignored the command of their officers to retreat when further resistance was considered useless.

To-day the Japanese Chief of Police at Chinwangtao was assaulted and bound by Chinese soldiers and civilians at the railway station, but was released later upon orders from the local commander who promptly apologized for the incident. — Reuter.

CHINESE MOBILISATION.

Peking, Jan. 13. Travelling by train, a large number of troops commanded by the Shanai Generals Shen Chen and Pong Ping-hsueh, passed through Tientsin yesterday, bound for Luanchow.

The final destination of these troops is Shih Ho, the main line of the Chinese defence.

Following the mobilisation order, other troops belonging to these leaders are being transported along the Peking-Hankow Railway, passing through Shun Tak yesterday.

The Shanai leaders have reached a definite understanding with Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang. — Special.

MA'S MEN IN JEHOI.

Nanking, Jan. 13. Ma Chan-shan's personal representatives in Nanking reports to the Government that the number of his former troops to have reached Jehoi total 40,000 men.

They have arrived at Linsai on the Jehoi border after a series of forced marches and are short of food, clothing and munitions. They are ready to assist in the defence of Jehoi when their most urgent needs are supplied.

Ma Chan-shan plans to travel to Geneva via Russia to make a personal report to the League on conditions in Manchuria.

In a telegram on this point, General Ma Chan-shan states that he ordered his troops in October to join General Su Ping-wen but when they arrived Su Ping-wen had fled. His troops were therefore, compelled to march to Jehoi, while he entered Soviet territory hoping to travel to Geneva and later to China. — Reuter.

DETERMINED TO FIGHT.

Geneva, Jan. 12. Mr. Wang Ching-wei has arrived here in connexion with the forthcoming meeting of the Committee of Nineteen.

The ex-Premier of China issued a statement to the effect that the Chinese people were determined to fight if they were unable to secure satisfaction from the League. — Reuter.

Conceived on conventional lines, the Queen's, would have been uninteresting but for the splendid characterization of the different parts by a notable cast including Helen Twelvetrees, Lewis Stone, Jean Hersholt, and Robert Young. The first-named is comparatively new to Hongkong picture-goers, but she has been seen to advantage in a few previous productions, and her performance in the current picture further enhances the good opinion already formed of her ability.

DAY BY DAY: NEWS IN BRIEF

VIRTUE IS NOT TO BE CONSIDERED IN THE LIGHT OF MERE INNOCENCE, OR ABSTINENCE FROM HARM; BUT AS THE EXERTION OF OUR FACULTIES IN DOING GOOD. — Bishop Butler.

Mr. Wong Kwong-tin is to distribute the scholarships and prizes to students at the Hwa Nam College at the Kio Shing Theatre at noon on the 10th instant.

The local St. John Ambulance Brigade's Florence Nightingale Nursing Division will be giving a concert at King's College to-morrow, Saturday, commencing at 7.30 p.m.

An interesting visitor to Hongkong at present is Mr. Victor Musick, a Czech-Slovakian journalist, who has been ten months in the Far East representing the Prague Journal Vesnik. He has spent over five months in Manchuria studying conditions there.

The many friends in Hongkong of Dr. W. V. M. Koch will be interested to know that he has settled in Bath England, and has started a consulting practice. Dr. Koch was for many years in charge of the Government Civil Hospital in Hongkong. Afterwards he set up in private practice here and was a member of the Sanitary Board. He left Hongkong a year ago.

Mr. E. W. Hamilton, Superintendent of Imports and Exports, prosecuted two Chinese this morning under the amended Import and Export Ordinance on a charge of attempting to export certain unmanifested cargo on the s.s. Klungchow and of placing the cargo aboard the ship without the consent of the owners, charterers or master. As it was the first case of its kind, defendants were let off with fines of $25 on each charge.

LANCASHIRE'S OUTLOOK

IMPROVEMENT IN YARN EXPORTS

COMPLAINTS AGAINST JAPAN

London, Jan. 12. British exports of cotton yarn in 1932 exceeded the volume of either of the two previous years, states the annual report of the Yarn Section of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce.

India, Rumania and China accounted for the most important increases. The boycott of Japanese goods by China doubled the result in an improved demand for Lancashire yarns.

The report, referring to the increases in the German duties on cotton yarns, states that the action had given a serious setback to Lancashire spinning interests and that the Board of Trade had been approached on the matter.

The report of the Near Eastern Section of the Manchester Chamber refers to the increasingly keen competition from Japan and elsewhere and says that the totally uneconomic selling prices of Japanese goods was proving one of the greatest obstacles to Lancashire's prosperity in Egypt and other important markets such as Turkey and Iraq. — Reuter.

PEAK BURGLARY SEQUEL

TWO MEN APPEAR IN COURT

Chan Chiu, formerly in the service of Mr. W. J. Waddington at 519, The Peak, and of Mr. C. M. Preshaw, of 520, The Peak, was this morning charged on five counts of burglary on five residences named, and also on five alternative counts of receiving. Evidence showed that the accused was involved in a series of burglaries during the past twelve months, and that he was arrested as the result of smart work on the part of a Chinese detective of the West Point Police Station.

Accused was remanded until to-morrow morning in order that he might give evidence against another former servant of Mr. Waddington's who was charged with receiving stolen property.

SENSATIONAL ENGLAND COLLAPSE

added, Sutcliffe was the victim of an extraordinarily fine catch. He played a defensive shot to one of O'Reilly spinners, but Wall, fielding at silly mid-on, leaped forward and snapped it up brilliantly a few inches from the ground. Sutcliffe had made nine out of sixteen. He had been batting for 46 minutes.

AMES NEXT.

Ames and Leyland commenced a dour defensive period. Leyland pulled O'Reilly to the leg side for the first boundary of the game.

Ames was at the wicket for twenty minutes before he opened his score. Finally he was beaten by Ironmonger's faster ball, his wicket being scattered.

Leyland and Wyatt played until the lunch interval.

AFTER LUNCH.

Leyland and Wyatt defended stoutly after lunch, taking not the slightest chance. Woodfull effected several changes, but both batsmen sat on the aplice, refusing to be tempted.

After half an hour's play, five runs had been added.

ENGLAND: 42 for 4.

FARMER'S HUT RAIDED

ROBBERS MAKE SMALL HAUL

Armed robbers are reported to have made their appearance at Taipokau, in the New Territories, in the small hours of this morning, when they raided a hut tenanted by a farmer, and escaped with a small sum of money and a few articles of clothing.

The farmer, his sister, and his 17-year-old son were asleep when they were aroused by the entry of three men, who, armed with choppers, made threatening and suggestive passes across their throats with the weapons. With the victims reduced to abject submission, the robbers went ahead with their enterprise, and when they finally left the house had divested the place of all articles of value it held.

Thongs and one of the choppers were picked up afterwards on a pathway leading from the house to the Railway Station, showing that the robbers went along the railway line in a westerly direction on fleeing.

Mr. Wallace Harper has reported to the police the theft of his private Ford roadster, No. 1640, while it was left outside his residence at N. 6, Dorset Crescent, Kowloon Road.

Fatally injured through a fall from the first floor of her home at No. 23, Caine Road, Chan Tai-tai was admitted to the Government Civil Hospital yesterday, where she died later.

WILL WITHDRAWAL OF SIM SHIELD MEAN HOCKEY DECLINE?

NEW POSITION TO BE FACED BY MAMAK TOURNAMENT

FEATURES OF WEEK-END PROGRAMME

(By "BULLY OFF")

WHETHER the decisions of the Sim Shield competitors, and the Mamak tournament committee will have a detrimental effect on the game of hockey in the Colony remains to be seen. It has been suggested to me that such moves by these two bodies will tend to lessen interest in the game. Personally, I see no reason for this if those participating are playing for the game's sake and not for the "Pot" at the end of it.

THE decision of the Army, Navy and Club on Wednesday to abolish the Sim Shield altogether may mean that the Mamak committee will have to do likewise in regard to their trophy to bring them into line with the ruling of the English Hockey Association, to which several of the clubs concerned owe allegiance. It rests entirely with the Army and Navy officials, for if they make no move and are content that the Mamak committee are conforming with the Home Association rules the competition will continue as it is at present, namely, that the trophy be lodged in a certain place and removed only for the purpose of inscribing the name of the winning team on it.

IF they decide that the teams in the competition are playing in convention to the rules of the Association then they will have no alternative but to ask the Service units to cancel their entry or to the Mamak committee to fall in line with the decision regarding the Sim Shield.

THE coming week-end should prove to be one of the most successful as far as hockey is concerned since the beginning of the season. Hockey enthusiasts will have a galaxy of games to watch, all of which should be productive of a high standard of hockey. The programme includes the clash between the Incognitos and H.M.S. Medway in the Mamak tournament on the Marina ground. The Incognitos enjoy an unbeaten record in the competition, having won all the games they have played. They have also the best goal average—an aggregate of 30 goals for and only three against. The Medway has not fared so well as several of their players have been on the injured list. On Saturday, however, they will be able to field their strongest eleven. During the past two months they have had to play with a depleted side as Hawgood, their centre forward and Allen have been kept from the game through injuries. They are now reported fit again and will be included in the team for Saturday.

THE teams will be as follows:
INCIGNITOS: A.E.P. Silva; F.G. Barros, E.V. Reed; P.M.N. Silva, W.A. Reed, F.M. Silva; C.E. Barros, J.M. Pinto, C.C. Francis, R. C. Reed and A.P. Souza.

MEDWAY: Evans; Robertson, Rhodes; Windsor, Dunn, Hodges; Nosworthy, Hawgood, Holmes, Lewis and Allen.

THE other Mamak matches will be between the Radio and the Parthian, and in this game the odds are in favour of the Radio, although the Parthian have been playing very good hockey of late; and between the Phoenix and the German Club at Caroline Hill. It would not come as a big surprise if the German Club held the Navy men to a draw.

THE G.B.A. Ladies will make their first appearance this season when they oppose St. Andrew's in the Car Clark cup competition at King's Park on Saturday. It will be remembered

PREPARING FOR SOCCER INTERPORT

PROBLEM FOR SELECTORS

NEED FOR INSIDE FORWARDS

NAVY'S GOOD SHOWING

(By "Veritas").

ALTHOUGH they had seen nothing to cause them to walk out of the Club ground yesterday with their faces wreathed in jubilant smiles, the Interport football selectors could regard the trial match and its result in a sanguine manner.

The game did not produce any geni, but for the most part the trial team came up to expectations, and yesterday's display there is little reason to doubt the final selection of players such as Rodgers, Strange, Pardoe, Bliss, Leung Wing-chui and A.V. Gosano.

But the selectors have a left wing problem to solve. Baldry is not worth his place. Blake, the Kenyon forward who operated as his partner yesterday did not impress as being up to Interport standard and Hill, his club colleague left one with a similar reaction.

SEAL'S CLAIMS

In grappling with this problem the selectors may find some inspiration from the Lai Wah Cup game to-morrow. It is pretty certain that Vernon Seal will be closely watched and it is conceivable that he will be brought in for a trial. Although not a bag of tricks like in Pakey, Seal has several virtues as a left winger, chief among them being his accuracy in middling the ball. He also enjoys a useful turn of speed and has the facility of picking up a pass from any angle.

ARMY MAY WIN

BETTER BALANCED COMBINATION

LEAGUE FEATURES

NEEDLE GAME IN DIVISION 2

(By "VERITAS").

THE Lai Wah Cup match between the Army and Civilian teams took place on Saturday, so that there is no programme of first division matches.

The cup teams appear to be extremely well-matched, and the outcome is not such that one can forecast with any degree of confidence.

Personally I like the chances of the military men. On paper, at least, there is more balance in their team than that of the Civilians. I am rather inclined to doubt the ability of Rodgers, Martin and Strange to prevent the very businesslike Army quintette from scoring goals, whereas the Civilians, although boasting among forwards, the Gosano brothers and Pile, will be opposed to a couple of fine backs in Allen and Mullane, and a fairly useful last line of defence in Henth.

There appears to be little to choose between the respective intermediate lines. Both, if in form, will be strong combinations and demanding no little skill to overcome.

ARMY GOAL SCORERS

The Army appear to have a somewhat more potent goal scoring attack than the opposition, with Bryant, Sands and Jones as three very determined inside men.

B. Gosano has not yet proved himself a success at inside left and I rather feel he is out of position. Hill will have to improve on yesterday's display to cause any worry to the Army rearward or to constitute an effective attacker for the Civilians.

but it is fairly certain that Pile and Santos on the wings will give of their best, which may have a material effect on the result.

Chief interest in the second division programme rests in the meeting of the Athletic, the leaders and the Lincoln. The game is at Chatham Road which offers a slight advantage to the soldiers, and after the unexpected reverse of the Chinese against the Artillery last Saturday, it is quite on the cards that the Lincoln will add to this shame.

CHAMPIONSHIP BID BY H.K.C.C.

DEFEAT OF CRAIGENGOWER OF MATERIAL HELP

FEATURES OF LAST WEEK'S CRICKET

(By "The Stumper")

IF the Hongkong C. C. win the Senior Shield—and I don't see why they cannot, with their all-round team—they must look back with thankfulness on their match against the Craigengower C.C. at Happy Valley last week. They won and collected three points, which have placed them in a very favourable position in the League, but if the last two men in the Valley side had not so foolishly run themselves out with only a few more minutes to play, they might just as well chase rainbows for all the chances they would have had of carrying off the trophy.

REPUTED to be a strong bowler and fielding side, the Craigengower attack, with the possible exception of Hubbard, was made to look mediocre. Both Omar and R. Lee showed signs of lack of practice, the former being perhaps more guilty in this respect. His swing, which has proved so difficult to play in the past, was missing, and the Club batsmen were not troubled by him at all. Hubbard did not have much luck, and bowled better than his four wickets for 40 runs suggested.

A. Pearce (58), A.W. Hayward (44) and H. Owen Hughes (34) were the chief contributors to the Club's score of 163 for seven wickets. Of the three, Hayward's knock was about the best, while Owen Hughes also produced some pretty shots. Pearce was dropped twice off Hubbard and should have been dismissed long before he reached the half-century.

AFTER the first two wickets had taken the score to 72, the rest of the Valley batsmen failed miserably to be all dismissed for 105 runs, of which E. Zimmern, their skipper, made 44. He played a true captain's innings, but received no support whatever. I don't understand why H. P. Lim was placed tenth in the batting order as he usually opens for the Craigengower, and I also fail to understand how he could have been run out in such a silly manner. I certainly would have expected a batsman of his experience to send Hanson back.

THE Civil Service C.C. obtained their first League point in four matches when they drew with the Royal Navy at King's Park. The visitors' attack was weak and the Navy batsmen were not unduly troubled. They proceeded to knock up 159 for four wickets, but could not dismiss the Civil Servants by the time stumps were drawn. Comdr. Williams played a good innings for his 60 while Shaw (43) and Mid. Farnhill (56) were the other scorers.

IT was left to B.C.K. Hawkins to save the C.S.C.C. from defeat after the first two wickets had fallen for only one run. Going in sixth, he hit out most gallantly and collected 32, by which time, the others, heartened I expect by his exhibition, made some sort of a stand. They played out time with 182 runs on the board and three wickets in hand.

WITH the juniors, the Civil Service C.C. lost their fifth consecutive game, while the Kowloon C.C. collected three points from the now almost unrecognisable Recreo team. The Hongkong C.C. played their third drawn game, this time against the Craigengower C.C., who have only dropped two points in four matches. The race for championship honours in this division is rather even and should prove very interesting as the season draws to a close.

LITTLE prominence has been given to the defeat of the Indian R.C. seniors by ten wickets at the hands of the University at Pokfulam last week. The Indians are making a bold bid to retain the championship, which they have won for the past two seasons, but I am afraid their batting is none too safe. A little strengthening of the batting and I would bet them against any other side in the League, but the return game with the Medway Officers' team on the R.N.O.R.C. ground, King's Park. When the teams met at Canton a few weeks ago the officers won by four goals to two in a closely contested game. Shamoon will be without the services of two of their regular players, Von Essen, centre-half, and J. Andrew, inside right. Frank Lammer, who usually plays on the left flank will deputise for Andrew in which position he will partner his brother, Oswald Lammer.

FRANK Lammer was a great disappointment in the game between the Club and the Navy on Wednesday.

ADMITTED that A.H. Madar was on the sick list, still there was no excuse for them to be skittled out for only 87 against the University attack. One man could not have made such a lot of difference, but I have been told that Gosano and Anderson were bowling very well. Later A.M. Rodrigues and D.J.N. Anderson were associated again in a valuable partnership which won the game for the undergraduates without their having to call on the others to bat.

THE University have not yet started on their League programme, but from what I have seen of them, they are not as weak as was at one time feared. Rodrigues and Anderson are in wonderful form at present, and they, together with L. T. Ride and E. L. Gosano not to mention Tinker Lee and H. Nomanbhoy, should be able to knock up a lot of runs for the University. I understand, however, that Anderson will be leaving for England on February 12 to continue his studies. Rodrigues will have to look for a new opening partner.

ONLY two League matches are down for decision to-morrow and both are in the junior division. The University will play their first game and I doubt very much if they can hold Hongkong C.C. A good game should be seen at King's Park where the K.C.C. will certainly win. The Peninsula team look stronger on paper, but the Police have a knack of upsetting calculations.

FRIENDLY matches in the senior division include that between the Hongkong C.C. and the University. Some idea of the strength of the undergraduates should be obtained in this game. The Navy will visit Sookunpo to meet the Indians. I understand that Commr. Shaw who wrenched an ankle earlier in the week is now fit again and may be turning out for the Navy. The Sookunpo ground will be a bit small if he gets going!

CINEMA SCREENINGS.

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

Married men... how would you like to be able to disguise yourself sufficiently to make love to your own wives? This situation supplies the reasons for the laughs in the amusing comedy, "The Guardsman," in which Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne are co-starred at the Queen's Theatre from Sunday. In this naughty Continental romance, an actor is very jealous of his wife. He imagines that she is casting her eyes towards other men. He resolves to test her fidelity. He disguises himself as a rough, vulgar Russian guard with a deep guttural voice. As the guardsman he succeeds in gaining a clandestine rendezvous with his own wife. What happens? Well, of course, it would be a shame to disclose that... for the incidents included provide most of the laughs in this play, which originally packed the Theatre for over a year. It was the biggest single stage success of Lunt and Fontanne, acknowledged leaders of the current American "legitimate" theatre. Sidney Franklin, who did such a fine job with "The Last of Mrs. Cheyne" and a long list of other hits, directed the picture. The screen version was written by Ernest Vajda from Ferenc Molnar's original drama, with continuity by Alaudine West.

"The Phantom President"
George M. Cohan for President! That's the resolution that has been adopted by the Hollywood, Breakfast Club, and the New York City Fiars Club. And it's not based on the fact that the veteran author, actor, producer and composer is cast in the role of a candidate for President in his first talking picture, "The Phantom President," in which he is featured with Claudette Colbert and Jimmy Durante, and which shortly comes to the King's Theatre. Cohan finds himself in "The Phantom President" in two similar roles—one as a candidate equipped for the business end of the Presidency, but lacking the personality to get votes; and the other as a "dead-ringer" for the candidate, equipped with the "goodwill" personality. Miss Colbert is cast as the girl over whom the two Cohans come to odds, and Durante as the pal of the pseudo-candidate.

"Unashamed"
Injured dignity launched Helen Twelveteens to success on the screen. If a theatrical producer hadn't "kidded" her for considering an offer to appear in them, the heroine of "Unashamed," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's vivid mystery drama now playing at the Queen's Theatre, would probably still be on the New York stage. "I was playing the lead" in "Roulette," she replied, "when an offer came from a New York studio to try the talkies. I didn't think much of it at the time, but mentioned it to the producer of the stage show I was in. He roared with laughter, assured me talking pictures couldn't last and told me it was exceedingly funny that I was considering them. Well, that made me a little angry—so I went into a talkie role to show him and it changed my whole career." During her first year in pictures Miss Twelveteens played small roles, but finally came to Hollywood, where Edmund Goulding, director of "Grand Hotel," cast her in "The Grand Parade," which started her on a brilliant list of performances. Her newest role, as the selfish girl whose headlessness places her brother in danger of his life, and who is forced to a terrific sacrifice to save him from her folly, is one of the sensational roles of the year. The story is by Bayard Veiller, noted playwright and author of "The Trial of Mary Dugan." "I enjoyed the picture hugely," says Miss Twelveteens, "because it was a far different type of role from any in my experience."

"Love Me Tonight"
Hollywood put a horse under contract to toss Maurice Chevalier from his back to the ground—as gently as possible. The horse is known simply as Brownie. He got the contract to make a sequel of "Love Me Tonight," Chevalier's latest starring picture, now at the King's Theatre. The sequence shows a hunt at a smart country estate. Maurice, in the role of a mere tailor impersonating a baron, and trying his darndest to impress Jeanette MacDonald, a woman of aristocratic family, almost reveals his true identity by his bad riding. His wife, however, saves the day after his spill from the horse, and soon Jeanette has yielded to his charms. But the secret of his identity ultimately comes out anyhow, and then it requires an amusing, but at the same time romantic climax, to straighten things up to everyone's satisfaction.

"The Old Dark House"
Charles Laughton, one of the featured players in "The Old Dark House" at the Central Theatre this week was a hotel clerk in London before the war, though his family wanted him to go in the navy. He did not go on the stage until five years after his war service.

"Bird of Paradise"
RKO Radio's lavishly produced spectacle of Richard Walton Tully's great stage play, "Bird of Paradise," comes to the Central on Sunday. Dolores Del Rio and Joe McGraw are starred. No expense was spared in making this thrilling film, which has been acclaimed as the sensation of the year. It drew repeat audiences year after year in the United States and ran a year in London. It earned its author $400,000.00. It made star after star in its legitimate dramatic career. And now RKO Radio has brought it to the screen in all its glory. Under the direction of that master of directors, King Vidor, it has been made into a wonderful picture—a vivid, spectacular picture of super-appeal; a picture of rare beauty and undying sentiment of this tremendous love story.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

"Do you ever bid a hand containing less than three high-card tricks in the one over one system?" is a question often asked. This is occasionally done. For example, take the following hand:

Spades—K-Q-J-4-2
Hearts—K-Q-J-3-2
Diamonds—5
Clubs—4-3

The hand contains two strong five-card major suits, but only two high-card tricks.

If you open with one spade and partner responds with a no trump, clubs or diamonds, you will be able to bid two hearts. Now, if he makes a re-bid, you can sign the hand off with a bid of three spades. For example, supposing the bidding were one spade by you, two diamonds, by partner, you bid two hearts, three clubs from partner. You should now bid three spades and sign the hand off.

Supposing, however, that the diamonds and hearts were reversed in this hand, as follows:

Spades—K-Q-J-4-2
Hearts—5
Diamonds—K-Q-J-3-2
Clubs—4-3

The hand should now be passed. While it contains identically the same cards, two strong suits and two high-card tricks, here is your problem.

If you open with one spade, partner will very probably respond with two hearts because you hold a singleton heart and the odds are greatly in favour of his holding hearts if he has any bid at all.

Holding a singleton heart, you would be forced to show your second suit with a bid of three diamonds, and undoubtedly partner's next response would be either three no trump or four clubs and you would be away up in the upper heavens with this hand without any high-card tricks.

It is all right to bid two suit hands even though you do not have a great number of high-card tricks, if you will realize what may happen, and if you are in a position to handle all of the situations so that the bidding does not get out of reach.

I give you the above example not to impress upon you the fact that in the one over one system of contract bidding we may open with two high-card tricks, but rather to show you the flexibility of the system—that it is based upon absolute common sense and sound reasoning.

What I wish my readers to realize in making a first or second-hand bid in the one over one system, is that it is not only high-card tricks and biddable suits that count, but that, most important of all, your hand must be flexible so as to make it possible to handle intelligently any bid that partner may make without carrying the bidding into a danger zone.

To-morrow we will take up the original no trump bids.

EARL'S SON FREED

FATAL ACCIDENT
IN BERKSHIRE

GRAND JURY'S
DECISION

London, Jan. 12.
Lord Howard of Effingham, older son of the fifth Earl of Effingham, was today finally discharged at the Berks Assizes on a charge of the manslaughter of a labourer who was found dead on the Henley Road at Remenham, Berks.
The Grand Jury returned a "No True Bill," and the trial was not,
therefore, proceeded with.

It will be recalled that Lord
Howard was acquitted in November last by the Maidenhead magistrates, but having been committed on a Coroner's Warrant, the jury
at the inquest finding that Lord
Howard was criminally negligent,
he was compelled to present himself for trial to-day.

The accident occurred on the night of October 9, when Lord
Howard drove from Henley to Maidenhead in a coupe car. At 11.30 he stopped near a Maidenhead constable and told him that he had something important to say. Broken glass fell from the car as Lord Howard got out. He said that he was covered in glass, and added, "I have run into something on the Henley road." He went to the police station.

VIOLENT IMPACT.
The windscreen glass on the near side was smashed and the near side wing lamp was missing.
In a statement Lord Howard said that the fog was very dense. He saw the bright headlights of a vehicle which appeared to be on the wrong side of the road.

"I pulled out to the right to avoid hitting it," Lord Howard stated, "and at the moment of passing I received a violent impact. I pulled up as soon as I could and went back to investigate, but could find nothing."
Next morning Hawke's body was found. His cap was 46 feet

One of the great Imperial Airways London-Paris liners which have created a new record.

BRITISH AIR RECORD

HERACLES CLASS
PERFORMANCE

London, Jan. 12.
The fleet of four Handley Page
biplanes, the Heracles class, which are the largest airliners yet commissioned by any transport company, have established a record in the regular day by day operation in the cross-Channel services of Imperial Airways.

Throughout the winter and summer months, these giant craft, each driven by four 550 h.p. Bristol Jupiter air-cooled motors, make the London-Paris journey
with clockwork precision.

The four planes have, between them, flown the equivalent of 400, 000 miles, and have carried altogether 47,300 passengers. During the summer months, each machine carried a daily average of 65 passengers.

The planes carry a crew of four passengers on each journey.—

ALARM FOR HINKLER

NOT THE SLIGHTEST
NEWS

SIX DAYS MISSING

London, Jan. 12.
The continued absence of news has now created the gravest fears as to the fate of Squadron-Leader
Hinkler, who left England on Saturday on a solo flight to Australia.

British aviation authorities are most anxious to receive any help which air or broadcasting authorities in countries along his route can offer in tracing the missing airman.

Hinkler was using the Puss Moth
aeroplane in which he flew the South Atlantic over a year ago and which possessed a range of about 2,000 miles.

It is believed that he intended to fly down the Rhone Valley and along the French and Italian Rivers to Rome over the Apen-nines to Brindisi, and, if fuel supplies permitted, over the 360 miles of the Adriatic to Athens, which is less than 2,000 miles from London.

What is not known is whether he deviated from this route because of the weather conditions which,
on Saturday, were generally bad
over Europe.—British Wireless.
